Many houses were damaged, and in some cases there was a total loss of furniture. The loss is now estimated at $30,000.

Terrible Storm in Texas.

GREENSVILLE, Tex., June 3.—[Special.]—A terrible tornado struck this city last evening. Rain fell in torrents for twenty minutes, and the total destruction of the town seemed inevitable; it came with such terrible force. A survey of the city shows over 150 houses blown down and moved off the blocks on which they rested, while large numbers of others are more or less damaged. Only one life was lost, that of a colored child. The loss in the city is variously estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000, and the loss in the country, by damage to property and crops, will greatly increase the aggregate.

Object to the Personal Column.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—There was a crusade against personal advertisements at a meeting held last night. The Herald's personal column was denounced as one that could have no existence in any civilized city else than New York. A member told a reporter, "I don't want you to think the society for ethical culture called this meeting. We are going to try and stop the Herald by means of the authorities, and if they don't move we shall fire them up with dynamite—moral dynamite, you know. Postmaster Pearson acts like an oyster, so we will try the postmaster-general."

New York Masons.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—The annual session of the grand lodge of free and accepted Masons of New York is to begin to-morrow afternoon. The grand lodge is composed of nearly 1000 members. Eight grand officers have died within the past year. Among them were Benjamin Willard, who gave the temple the beautiful statue of "[illegible]," at the head of the main staircase. The grand lodge also lost the valuable services and presence of the late C. Henry King and James W. Simonton, once agent of the New York Associated Press.

They Visited the Fireworks from a Distance.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—Homer Halliston, of Olive Bridge, New York, and Rev. W. H. Peters, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of that place, went up to High Point, one of the most prominent Catskill peaks, and 4400 feet above tidewater, Thursday evening, to ascertain if fireworks on Brooklyn bridge could be seen from that point. As soon as they reached the summit they got correct bearings, and then waited for darkness. They were rewarded by seeing a number of rockets quite distinctly.

A Family of Missionaries.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—Walter Lowrie of this city graduate of Princeton college and of Princeton theological seminary, was yesterday afternoon ordained as minister to northern China, by the presbytery of New York. The new missionary is a nephew of Rev. Walter Lowrie, who was killed by Chinese pirates, and is a son of Reuben L. Lowrie, who died in China. He himself was born in China, but came to this country after his father's death. He will not start for the mission field for several weeks.

Brooklyn Bridge.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special]—Correspondents continue to complain of the construction of the mammoth bridge. There had just been erected a railing in the centre, and notices posted reading: "Take to the right and keep moving." This proved a failure yesterday and the crowds had to get to the opposite side. Many correspondents suggest removing the six or seven flights of stairs, which would give a straight gangway of forty-seven feet instead of seventeen as now.

A Strike Threatened.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The conductors and engineers employed on the cable street railway, south division, met at midnight last night, and after rejecting the company's proposition to pay them twenty cents per hour instead of forty cents per trip, drew up a memorial to the management, proposing payment by the trip ranging from thirty to thirty-seven cents, according to the length. Unless an acceptance of the proposition is signified before noon to-morrow the men will strike.

The Surgical Association.

CINCINNATI, June 2.—At the afternoon session of the surgical association a number of papers were read. On motion of Dr. Kinlock, of South Carolina, the secretary was directed to send a note to each member, asking him if he subscribes to the ethics of the American medical association, and if not, asking him to resign. The next meeting will be held at Washington in the spring of 1884.

Poisoned by Lemon Pie.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Three families, numbering twelve persons, partook of lemon cream pie, purchased to-day at a bakery and restaurant on Milwaukee avenue. All of them are now very sick with symptoms of poisoning. It is stated that sixty-five other persons ate of the same pie at the restaurant during the day, but as all were transient customers it is not known whether or not they were affected.

Mrs. Parnell Sells Her Pictures, etc.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—The pictures and other works of art owned by Mrs. Delia Stewart Parnell are to be sold by auction to-morrow afternoon at Leavitt's art rooms. Mrs. Parnell has disposed of the family laces and her jewelry to personal friends. The house and farm at Bordentown have been advertised to let.

Gen. Grant in Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, June 3.—General and Mrs. Grant arrived in this city last night, remaining until this afternoon, when they left for Lexington. A Courier-Journal reporter interviewed Grant on the political situation, the latter expressing the opinion that Blaine and Logan were each very strong men for the republican nomination in 1884.

After Carl Schurz.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—George W. Julian writes a long open letter to Carl Schurz, asking did he rob the people after he helped rob Tilden of the presidency. The letter is two columns long, and in it Schurz is charged with conveying to railroad companies lands that did not belong to them.

Beecher on Newspapers.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—Beecher, in his sermon last night, said incidentally that newspapers were divine, but like many other great institutions they did not always carry their divinity on their face. Should they be suppressed or discontinued, however, society would go back 1000 years.

Political News of the Day.

NEW YORK, June 3—[Special.]—The chief political news this morning is the gathering of a sentiment in Ohio to make Foster the republican candidate for governor this fall, and the efforts of many democrats to place Tilden and Hendricks on the democratic national ticket in 1884.

An Ohio Man.

LANCASTER, Ohio, June 3.—[Special.]—Otis Julian, the proprietor of the Italian circus, who died on the journey from New Zealand to San Francisco, was a citizen of this place, and had made a fortune in Australia and the Sandwich islands.

The New Consul Attends Church.

NEW YORK, June 3.—Tang Ming, the new Chinese consul, and his secretary, interpreter and translator attended services at Plymouth church, Brooklyn, to-day. They were dressed in the costume of their native land.

Small Collection for the Pope.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—So small was the collection taken up for the pope Sunday that the bishop of this diocese was ashamed to publish the amount in the papers.

Insipid and Egotistical.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—William Henry Hurlburt prints the first of his recollections in Truth to-day. It is generally characterized as insipid and egotistical.

Rum at the Same Old Price.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—The excise law was not strictly enforced, either here, in Brooklyn or Jersey City yesterday, and rum could be had at the usual price at the usual places.

Sailed for His Post.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—Richard Lambert, United States consul at San Blas, Mexico, sailed for his post yesterday, on the Pacific mail steamer Acapulco.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

RAILROAD AND STEAMER CHANGES.

GALVESTON, June 3.—It is rumored that the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe is in direct negotiation with the management of the Southern Pacific road for making an arrangement by which the gulf business of the latter line will be concentrated at Galveston. The Morgan steamship line, instead of having headquarters at Clinton, will localize at this point. A line of steamers will be run from New York to this port, partly composed of some of the ships now plying to New Orleans, and the fleet now engaged in the trade here will continue its present work, extending along the coast of Mexico, and during the trading season be so regulated that three trips a month will be made from Vera Cruz. Santa Fe will be operated fully and completely for eastern and western business with the Huntington lines, just as if it was leased to that interest, and trains west to San Francisco, and east from New Orleans, will run through direct to Galveston. It is also said that all negotiations between the Santa Fe and the Texas and Mexican are off, the Santa Fe having declined the propositions made them by Palmer. Sullivan parties, it is said, are in accord with the spirit of the arrangements with the Southern Pacific.

SUNDAY TRAINS STOPPED.

NEW HAVEN, June 3.—A Sunday train on the Housatonic railroad was stopped to-day by the Massachusetts authorities. Clergymen in Berkshire county, Mass., presented a petition against the running of trains on Sunday, but the railroad company disregarded them.

A STRIKE THREATENED.

SAN ANTONIO, June 3.—It is whispered that the engineers, conductors, brakemen and other employes of the Southern Pacific west of here are organizing a strike on account of the recent 10 per cent. reduction.

Ernest Rowe of Hannibal, Mo., says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of sick headache."

CALIFORNIA.

The Anti-Railroad Convention a Fizzle.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.—[Special.]—The convention held in San Jose yesterday afternoon, having for its object the denunciation of railroads, resulted in nothing more than a huge fizzle. Even the rabid speeches, which were naturally to be expected from politicians who owed their positions to anti railroad pledges taken by them previous to election, were by no means as conspicuous as people had been led to suppose. The meeting throughout was wanting in the particulars of popular demonstration, and despite liberal advertising was slimly attended. Attorney General Marshal, who was in attendance, was disposed to treat the matter lightly, as is evidenced by his remarks to the reporters in accounting for the thinness of the assemblage, which were: "Of course you couldn't expect to get many people out to hear six men speak. Great heavens! who could stand that? I wouldn't go to any meeting where six men were to speak." Of course Denis Kearney and Steve Mayhall of sand lot fame, were among the interested spectators. When the meeting was called to order only 300 persons were present. General Nagle, the prime mover in the convention, after reading resolutions which demanded that the railroad commissioners keep their pledges, left the hall and drove away.

Passengers Losing their Tickets.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 3.—[Special.]—Complaint of passengers going north, who have in some mysterious way lost their tickets shortly after purchasing them, has been frequent of late. The Oregon which sailed yesterday, developed a number of such cases, in all of which, however, the tickets were unearthed and restored to their proper owners. An incident which occurred on the dock shows some of the means employed by the finders of lost tickets to avail themselves of them. A gentleman named C. H. Hill gave notice shortly before the sailing of the steamer that the ticket which he purchased the day previous had been lost. In a few minutes a man stepped from the crowd, stating that he was unable to go to Portland on that steamer, and asking for exchange to the next. He gave a fictitious name, which, as it did not appear on the way bill, proved that the ticket belonged to some other person. Investigation further disclosed that it belonged to Mr. Hill. The man, after explaining that he had received it from a woman, skulked away.

Coincides with Henry George.

SAN JOSE, June 2.—P. S. Dorney to-night addressed a meeting at the California theater. He spoke at length, dealing with the monopoly question in detail. The address was characterized by dignified delivery and clear, convincing logic, which marked it as an oratorical effort of the day. Mr. Dorney shared Henry George's ideas, as expressed in "Progress and Poverty," and dwelt largely upon the propositions advanced there. He was listened to throughout with marked attention.

THE STAGE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Modjeska and Wyndham Company Financial Failures—The Thomas Concerts Programme.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.—The Wyndham Comedy Company played to a beggarly array of empty boxes. There is no accounting for the taste of a San Francisco audience.

Modjeska's engagement has not been as successful, financially, as the opening nights promised. This is due to the miserly support given her.

Barrett continues in favor, and deservedly so. The present week is his last.

Voegtlin is at work on the scenery for the "Silver King," which is to be presented at the California theatre on June 25 by the Wallack Theatre Company.

The managers of the Thomas concerts have issued the programme. It is a handsome pamphlet of 1[illegible]2 pages, tastefully illustrated and containing portraits of prominent composers, with notices of their works. It also contains biographies, notices of Theodore Thomas, Emma Thursby and others who take part in the festival.

Gustave Frohman will shortly visit San Francisco to arrange dates for the Madison Square Company.

The Union Square Theatre Company opens in San Francisco August 13, for a period of six weeks, in which time the entire repertoire of the company will be produced.

WILL FILL A CHECK FOR LANGTRY.

Mr. Schwab says that on the 9th of June he will fill a check on a New York bank, payable to Mrs. Langtry, for $100,000, as her share of the profits of her seven months season in this country. On that date she will close her season and after a month's sojourn at the principal watering places, will cross the Atlantic and spend July and August in England, returning to this country in September, when she will begin her second season at Montreal, where she will produce a drama written expressly for her by R. O. Stevenson of London.

Modjeska, with her husband Count Bozenta, is going to take a trip to the Yellowstone national park.

Emerson retires from the Standard, to be succeeded by the Courtright and Hawkins minstrels.

Madame Janauschek succeeds Barrett at the California on June 11. It is thought her engagement will be a great success, as she is a great favorite with the Germans, and apart from that she is acknowledged to be what is sometimes termed a "powerful" actress.

ARIZONA.

A Prominent Citizen Shot.

TOMBSTONE, June 3.—M. M. McDowell, a prominent citizen of Charleston, was shot and probably fatally wounded by George Ellis this morning. McDowell was standing in front of his place of business, when Ellis appeared on the opposite side of the street armed with a Winchester rifle. The latter fired immediately, the shot taking effect in the left side of McDowell, passing through the lungs and emerging at the right nipple. Ellis claims McDowell had threatened his life.

Band of Hostiles Seen.

TOMBSTONE, June 3.—A party of seven hostile Apaches were seen yesterday near Johnson's ranch, fifty miles east of Tombstone and forty miles north of the Sonora line. They were going toward the San Carlos reservation, and had evidently been driven from the Sierra Madres. The hostiles fired on some herders, but the latter escaped unhurt.

NEVADA.

Rich Strike at Eureka.

EUREKA, June 3.—In running an open cut into the hill opposite the hoisting works of the Geddes & Bertrand Company, in Secret canyon, there has been uncovered a very large body of high-grade carbonate ore. It is a continuation of the ore body in the mine. Superintendent R. D. Clark thinks it is the largest and best body ever yet uncovered by the company.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Colfax Notes.

COLFAX, June 2.—[Special.]—The district court for Whitman county will convene at Colfax on Monday. Following are the criminal arraignments: F. C. Hammond, murder; Henry Flanigan, murder; W. H. Gassaman, larceny; J. B. Hess, selling liquor to minors; John N. Colton, allowing glandered horses to run at large; D. B. Davis, larceny; N. Doyle, larceny; F. C. Hammond, charged with murder, will make a desperate fight for life and liberty, and will plead that the killing of Grinnell was done in self defense.

Colfax, in view of the speedy completion of the railroad, is making many improvements. Business buildings and residences are being erected. Main street is being graded and paved with rock and gravel, and the many roads leading to the town are being improved. A large merchant flouring mill will soon be erected, and the extensive saw mill and sash and door factory, of Braxton & Codd will be enlarged in the fall or ensuing spring. A movement is also on foot for the erection of a grain elevator. A new era is dawning upon Colfax.

News Notes from Seattle.

SEATTLE, May 3.—It is stated that the railroad company will try the experiment of making its cars at this place, with a view to establishing a manufactory at Seattle.

Coal shipments from Seattle for the month just closed amount to a total of 11,814 tons. Considering the long delays in repairing and changing the machinery at Newcastle, the burning of the steamer Mississippi and the coal bunkers, the showing is highly creditable. The output for the present month will undoubtedly be largely in excess of the above figures.

Work on a new wharf and warehouse of the improvement company will commence shortly, and a capacity of 4000 tons will be thus added to the already ample dock room of the company. This improvement must be completed before the fall crops are due.

The Third street school property, four lots, will be sold to-morrow, for the purpose of raising funds for a $25,000 school building in Seattle.

ADVERTISING FOR RAILROAD TIES.

SEATTLE, June 3.—[Special.]—The Oregon Improvement Company advertises for the delivery of 50,000 ties on the line of the railroad to be built into the Cedar river coal fields, forty miles.

THE MINING INDUSTRY.

Comprehensive Report by Director of the Mint Burchard on the Yield of Gold and Silver.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Following is an abstract of the special report of Burchard, director of the mint, upon the production of precious metals in the United States, now in the hands of the printers. The yield of the mines of the United States, for the year 1882, was $32,500,000 in gold, and $46,800,000 in silver, which, compared with the previous year, shows a decline of $2,200,000 in gold, and an increase of $800,000 of silver. The comparative decline in the production of gold was greater in California than any other state or territory, the yield being $1,400,000 less than in 1881. This resulted from the interruption of hydraulic mining in some of the northern and middle counties of that state, owing to litigation; also from a falling off in the production of the quartz mines at Bodie. In Oregon, where the mining is chiefly placer, there was a diminution, and also in Nevada, Idaho and Dakota. In silver the principal increase was in Idaho, Montana and New Mexico, Idaho showing an increase of $700,000, Montana $1,740,000, and New Mexico $1,500,000. Colorado furnished about $500,000 less silver than in 1881. Of the bullion production of the country $30,964,978 in gold and $31,400,798 in silver were deposited at the mints and assay offices for coinage, or return in bars to the depositors. Of the deposits of gold $5,500,000 were paid in bars for manufacturing purposes, and the remainder went into coinage; $1,[illegible] were furnished by private refineries for the manufacturers of the United States. There was an export of $175,000 in silver bars. Of the total silver production $15,[illegible]0,000 were exported, $5,994,000 furnished by the mints and assay offices to manufacturers, $360,000 by private refineries for the same purposes and $24,700,000 used in coinage.

PRODUCTION BY STATES AND TERRITORIES.

The production of the country, from states and territories, are as follows:

	Gold.	Silver.
Alaska	$150,000	......
Arizona	1,065,000	$7,500,000
California	16,800,000	845,000
Colorado	3,360,000	16,500,000
Dakota	3,300,000	175,000
Georgia	250,000	......
Idaho	1,500,000	2,000,000
Montana	2,550,000	437,000
Nevada	2,000,000	6,750,000
New Mexico	150,000	800,000
North Carolina	190,000	25,000
Oregon	830,000	35,000
South Carolina	25,000	......
Washington Territory	120,000	......
Wyoming Territory	60,000	......

In 1882 $9,309,175 were paid in dividends by incorporated companies. This was a slight falling off from the preceding year. One hundred and seventy-five companies made assessments upon stockholders for the purpose of carrying on mining operations, amounting to about $9,000,000. During the year there was a greater decline in the amount deposited at the mints and assay offices than the difference between the gold production of 1881 and 1882, but there was a larger amount of gold consumed by the mechanical industries of the country. The amount of silver deposited at the mints and assay offices increased about $3,500,000, which corresponds closely to the increased production of the year. The excess of production over consumption for the year, added to the net imports of gold, resulted in a net gain to circulation of less than $2,000,000 gold, but by coinage and net import the metallic circulation had gained $30,200,000 in gold and about $27,000,000 in silver coin.

CALIFORNIA WILL HOLD HER PLACE.

California still maintains the second place in the list of gold and silver producing states and territories, and is likely to do so for some time to come. The suits brought to prevent the deposit of debris from placer and hydraulic mines has been virtually settled. More attention also is being paid to the development of quartz mines in California, and their low grade ores, by improved amalgamating processes, which promises to yield in the future steady if not large profits. Its gold fields show no evidences of exhaustion. On the contrary the magnitude of the deposits in ancient river beds, the number of permanent quartz lodes, as well as the virgin ground undeveloped, insure a golden harvest for many years to come. Nevada shows a decrease in gold and silver of about $1,600,000, which is chiefly due to the rapid decline in the yield of the great Comstock lode, which reduced it first to third rank. This state has suffered probably more than any other mining section from stock speculation and management on mining, but reaction seems to be setting in, and mining in Nevada is being conducted on a more substantial basis than in the preceding year. But there was a notable increase in silver in Montana, where the mining industry has increased in importance, the increased yield having been in silver, which from $2,630,000 in 1881 is in 1882 $4,370,000.

Utah shows an increased production of $400,000 in silver, and the permanency of the mining industry in the territory is assured. Arizona has maintained her large production, which is nearly $8,500,000. New Mexico, the oldest mining section of the country, has not hitherto appeared as a large producer of bullion, but during the last two years rich discoveries have been made, which increased the annual production to $1,800,000. In Colorado it has been claimed that there was a large excess of production in 1882 over that of 1881, but from examination of the reports of shipments of ore and bullion, and the books of smelting works. It is shown that the increase has been in the value of base metals.

ALASKAN NEWS.

Discouraging Reports from Harrisburg—Nothing Heard from the Schieffelins.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 3.—[Special.]—News from Takou is discouraging. Only a few men working on Douglas island, three miles from Harrisburg, taking out an inconsiderable quantity of gold. Seven miles back from Harrisburg over the coast range is a large basin about ten miles in extent but unworkable, many claims being covered with snow sixty feet. Last year nothing was taken out of these diggings to justify any excitement. The general features of the coast land are not such as to make an old miner count it a mineral bearing country. There are a few spots where gold in fair quantities may be found, but no such thing as paying gravel. Old Cassiar miners, many of whom are at Harrisburg, are not even attempting to locate claims, as they have no faith in these diggings, but are merely hanging on in the hopes of hearing good news from Yukon, which many have great hopes in in consequence of the mineral belt, which enriched so many at Cariboo, passing through a great tract of country. There are about 400 miners at Harrisburg, none of whom will return home.

THE SEARCH FOR THE SCHIEFFELINS.

There are very few men at Takou, and they are only doing a blanket business. The report in January that a courier from the Schieffelin brothers had been sent overland from Yukon to Sitka is entirely discredited at that place, the inhabitants saying that nothing has been seen or heard of such person. The Schieffelins, since they started in their steam schooner for the mouth of the Yukon river to prospect its banks and tributaries, have not been heard from or heard of. A party of prospectors, seven in number, left Harrisburg last summer, journeying overland to Yukon, in expectation of meeting the Schieffelin party, taking with them eighteen months' provisions. They had to travel over a portage of thirty miles to the first lake, where the south fork of Yukon river heads, having to pay the Indians for that short distance the sum of $10 per hundred pounds. They built canoes on the shore of the lake, going from there down to the main river a distance of 250 miles to fort Selkirk, an old abandoned Hudson Bay Company's fort. Nothing has been heard of them yet, but no anxiety is felt, as they are provisioned for eighteen months.

THE PRIZE RING.

AN ENGLISH LORD WHIPS JEM MACE.

CHICAGO, June 3.—[Special.]—Papers here publish the following from London: Lord Charles Beresford has entered the prize ring as a rival of Jem Mace and the Maori. No sooner was the recent fight announced than his lordship's aristocratic blood stirred for a fight and he challenged the Maori and Mace, and a set-to without gloves was arranged. Mace accepted the challenge and the fighters met in a specially engaged private room, near the Elephant and Castle, a public house in the borough road. The Prince of Wales was present, surrounded by a large number of aristocratic and private gentlemen. Heavy betting was indulged in. After several exciting rounds, in which excellent science was displayed on both sides, Mace failed to come to time, and finally said he was badly beaten. Lord Charles won an easy victory, and almost without a scratch. When Lord Charles had finished with Mace he invited Slade to take a turn, but the Maori refused to enter the ring. Mace took the defeat quietly. It is now known that Lord Charles had intimated that his royal highness, an English gentleman, could always whip a professional fighter, and he had expressed a determination to meet Mace and the Maori giant at the first opportunity. Lord Charles commanded the Condor, a gunboat, in a daring attack at close quarters with Alexandria forts in the Egyptian war.

MITCHELL FINDS HIS MATCH IN AN AMATEUR.

ALBANY, New York, June 3.—[Special.]—A match with gloves was fought last night, between Ned Lynch, a stone cutter, well known in the city as a hard hitter, and Charles Mitchell, the English boxer. Mitchell was knocked down twice in three rounds, and Lynch was floored twice, but came up to the scratch each time. The fight grew very bitter, and both pugilists lost their temper, when the police stepped on the platform and ordered the men to desist.

THE APACHES.

The Hostiles Expected to Split Into Bands and Seek Another Stronghold.

EL PASO, Tex., June 3.—[Special.]—Information dated Carmen, state of Chihuahua, May 27, states that the company of Mexican soldiers who had been out scouting had returned, and that all their conversation was about "Muchos soldiers Americanos" (lots of American soldiers). On being interrogated, they stated that while in the mountains, two days ride north of Ternoschi, they had seen a great many American soldiers. They had been on the road from Ternoschi to Carmen two days, which would give the 23d of May on which the Mexican soldiers saw the Americans. This news coincides with the date of the departure of various Mexican expeditions, telegraphed the 8th ultimo, and certainly proves that the missing general is not lost.

LOCO WANTS TO SURRENDER.

WILLCOX, A. T., June 3.—[Special.]—From Chiricahuas, who surrendered a few days ago to the military authorities, it is learned that Loco is not with Juh's band of hostiles, but is waiting a favorable opportunity to surrender, together with the remnant of his band, some twenty-six warriors, and that the hostiles now on the war path in Mexico number some 200 in all. The prisoners left Mexico before Crook's fight, and say that if hard pressed the hostiles will scatter in small bands and then concentrate at other [illegible] only known to the Indians. Should [illegible] occur, and taking into consideration the almost inaccessible hights of the mountains, the magnitude of the task undertaken by Crook is readily understood. They say the hostiles are well supplied with arms, but ammunition is scarce, and that with the exception of Juh's followers the rest of the hostiles, about 100, would gladly surrender, if permitted to do so. From this and the fact that Indians in small bands are reported as having been seen at various places along the line of the Mexican Central railroad, and near the Arizona line, in the mountains, it would seem probable that they are making their way back to the reservation to surrender. The Mexican troops from Chihuahua and Sonora are co-operating heartily with Crook, and have given every aid in their power. Crook has yet twenty days' rations and an ample supply of stores at Silver creek, on the Sonora and Arizona line.

CROOK'S CAMPAIGN SAID TO BE A FAILURE.

TOMBSTONE, June 3.—[Special.]—There are indications that the main body of the Apaches eluded Crook and escaped from the cordon which he with the Mexican troops from Chihuahua was endeavoring to form around them. If this be true Crook's Sierra Madre campaign has already partially ended in a failure, as the latest advices from Mexican headquarters in Sonora state that the American troops are not to be permitted to pursue the hostiles when driven from their Sierra Madre strongholds in the interior. They state furthermore that Colonel Bandala, commanding in Sonora, utterly refuses to co-operate further than to protect as far as possible exposed regions in his state. The repeated statements telegraphed from El Paso that the Sonora troops, commanded by Colonel Lorenzo Garcia, are co-operating with Crook, is not true. Garcia was relieved from command May 5 because it was claimed he was believed to have an understanding with Crook.

A courier from Sonora headquarters should have visited this place yesterday, but has not yet been heard from. It is believed he has not been able to elude straggling bands of hostiles.

OPINIONS OF ARMY OFFICERS.

NEW YORK, May 3.—[Special.]—The eastern press is still apprehensive for the safety of General Crook. Well informed army officers of this city are more anxious lest Crook fail to get within striking distance of the enemy before they break up in small parties and step back into Arizona. There are indications in the last news from Arizona that this, even now, is going on. Predictions are made by old hands that Crook will get no fight out of them in the Sierra Madres.

THE CHARGES AGAINST HILL.

A Chicago Firm Feels that Injustice has been Done Them by the Supervising Architect.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Ex-Congressman Murch to-day addressed a letter to Secretary Folger, wherein he informs the secretary that inasmuch as the attorney selected from among the employes of the treasury department (Jno. J. Blair) to assist in the investigation of the affairs of Architect Hill's office, was acting for both Hill and himself, Murch, as prosecutor and defender, he (Murch) would notify the secretary that so far as he was concerned the services of Mr. Blair could be dispensed with, and Murch would employ his own special counsel in the case. Murch has received a letter from Crane Bros., a manufacturing company of Chicago, wherein they state they are pleased to see him taking active steps to investigate the charges against Architect Hill in regard to the alleged malfeasance of office, in letting contracts, and various irregularities connected with his official position. "They trust he will continue pressing the good work until the bottom is reached." Crane Bros. enclose in their letter to Murch a copy of the following letter, which they state they mailed to Secretary Folger:

THE COMPLAINT TO FOLGER.

CHICAGO, April 7, 1883.

Hon. Folger, Secretary, Dear Sir: In the spring of 1879 this company, among others, made a bid for elevators for the house and postoffice in Chicago, but through an error of the superintendent in charge here our bid was made for steam elevators, while the government adopted hydraulic elevators, for which we had not made a bid. The matter was then brought to the attention of Secretary Sherman, who ordered an investigation, and who stated, upon a report made, that but for the fact that he had promised to have the court room ready for occupancy at a certain time he would cause the whole matter to be reopened and new bids made. We charge that Hill, the government architect, made a representation to Sherman regarding the delay which would be occasioned by having new bids made, and that, in fact, the rooms were not ready for the elevators for many months subsequent to the time named. In an opinion passed on the report by Secretary Sherman, he stated: "But for the delay in this case, a serious one, I would set aside the award." Further assurances were given this company that for any future wants by the government of elevators, a full, fair opportunity should be offered us to compete for such work. Since that date (1879) we have had no advice or opportunity to compete for such work for the treasury department, although we are advised that a large number of elevators have been contracted for for that department. Having thus briefly called your attention to this matter we would next respectfully ask that you cause an investigation to be made, showing how many elevators have been contracted for since those for the custom house in Chicago, in 1879, were erected, and by whom, and what competition, if any, was invited or allowed, under the dictation or control? Architect Hill and I feel that great injustice has been done in not giving us an opportunity to compete for such elevators as have been contracted for since those cited above.

Very respectfully, R. T. CRANE, President.

SPORTING NOTES.

BASEBALL BY ELECTRIC LIGHT.

FORT WAYNE, June 2.—Two thousand people witnessed the trial game of ball by electric light, between the Quincy northwestern league club and the college club to-night. Seventeen Jenny electric lights were used. The pitcher and catcher were enabled to work fairly, but the fielding was unsatisfactory, owing to an insufficient number of lights. Seven innings were played. Score: Quincey 19, college 11.

PROVIDENCE, June 2.—Clevelands 6, Providence 1.
NEW YORK, June 2.—New York 22, Chicagos 7.

FRONTIN WINS THE GRAND PARIS PRIZE.

PARIS, June 3.—The race for the grand prix de Paris, run to-day, was won by Duc de Castries's Frontin, Sir Johnstone's St. Blaise second, Count De Lagrange's Farfadet third. Reveille and Dervische made the running, with Frontin third, until rounding the last bend, when Frontin took the lead and won by a half length. There were three lengths between the second and third. Satory was fourth and Regain fifth. Eight ran.

THE BEST OF THE YEAR.

CLEVELAND, June 3.—[Special.]—The five-year-old trotter Jay Eye See, who became celebrated in the famous four-year-old race against Bronze and Wattling at Chicago last year, trotted here yesterday, going on the outside of the track in 2:16¾, the best performance of the year. He is entered against some of California's crack horses at Chicago.

STALLION RACE AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, June 3.—[Special.]—The stallion race for a purse of $500, to be trotted July 11, has closed with the following entries of noted horses: Black Cloud, Santa Claus, Monroe Chief, Alexander and Voneruim. It promises to be a most exciting contest.

THE POINT OF PINES COURSE SHORT.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Hanlan says the Point of Pines course is not three miles long. Kennedy says it was a minute short. Hanlan will wager $5000 or $10,000 that he can row the course he rowed Thursday in eighteen minutes.

A NOVEL RUNNING RACE.

BOSTON, June 3.—Duncan C. Ross has accepted the challenge issued by John L. Sullivan, pugilist, for 100 or 150 yards running race, each contestant to carry a man weighing 150 pounds on his shoulders.

FIRE.

FOREST FIRES IN MICHIGAN.

DETROIT, June 3.—Reports are received here of extensive fires raging in the pineries northwest of Tawas, but there are no details whatever. Fears are expressed of heavy damage, unless rain speedily comes to the relief.

MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 4 1883

SATURDAY'S LOCAL NEWS.

From the Sunday Oregonian

H M Savage publisher of the Occident of San Francisco is in the city

Miss Anna Durkee of Salem is visiting at Mrs R Sewall's, in this city

No injunction papers were filed yesterday against the proposed Northern Pacific bridge.

The government schooner Ernest is now at Gray's harbor the coast survey officials on board being engaged in making a topographic survey of that fine sheet of water

Cherries are turning red in the gardens around town and we may soon hope to enjoy the grateful cooling acid of the most delicious of summer fruits without bankruptcy staring us in the face

It is said that the royal bengal tiger has deserted all his haunts in this city and that his glossy striped form has been seen in the jungles of our sister city. Just what has put the animal to flight is not known by any one except faro players. Probably the grand jury being in session has had something to do with it

Mr Holcomb an inspector appointed by the land department to visit the land offices and surveyor-generals offices throughout the country has completed his inspection of Surveyor General Tolman's office in which he has been employed for the past three days. Nothing will be known of his opinions in regard to the establishment until the issuance of his report from the government printing office

SUCCESSFUL INDEED

The soliciting committee for the printers picnic met with great success yesterday in obtaining prizes for their affair which takes place the 16th inst. There will be no fewer than seventy-five prizes offered to participants in the excursion—all of them valuable

CARS FOR THE PARK

Two handsome summer cars came up on the Queen for the Multnomah street railway company. They are open at the sides and the seats are placed across the floor instead of lengthwise as in other street cars. They will accommodate thirty passengers each and are very handsomely finished. They are intended to run out to the "park" and have the words "City Park" painted on the sides. They foreshadow the time when the park shall become a place of public resort but just how far before the shadow falls is hard to tell.

THE SALMON RUN

The take of salmon in the Columbia during the past week has been very good, especially during the early part of the week. It has fallen off slightly for the past day or two, but the fish taken are mostly of large size. The wheels at the Cascades have done rather a light business in salmon, but have just everlastingly scooped out sturgeon. One wheel captured over a hundred of these fish in one day, and many of them were whoppers. Just what was done with them has not been ascertained, but it is supposed that enough were saved to supply the demand for sea bass. If these huge fish could be utilized in any way, fortunes could be made in catching them.

FINAL ARGUMENT.

Judge Stott announced in the state circuit court yesterday that he was prepared to render a decision upon all points in the Schneider habeas corpus case, except one. The point upon which the judge was undecided was that the charter granted to the council the power to "license, tax regulate and restrain barrooms and drinking shops," but in the ordinance in question the council had gone further than the charter allowed them in assuming to control the traffic in spirituous and malt liquors. This point was argued at length yesterday afternoon by R Williams and J C Moreland for the city, and Mr. Drake for the defense. The length of time spent in arguing this point shows that it was a difficult one to decide. Judge Stott will probably render a decision in the matter on Monday

COL. JOSEPH TAYLOR AND COMPANY

C W. Randall swore out a warrant in the police court yesterday for the arrest of Joe Taylor and Mollie Berdan on a charge of assault and battery. It is stated by Randall that he was looking at the birds in front of Taylor's dive when a fellow who is supposed to be a dealer at Taylor's brace faro game came out and insultingly ordered him away. The notorious Molly Berdan then came out of the saloon and struck him with a whip, when the faro dealer picked up a buggy whip and struck him over the head, causing him to stagger back. "Col." Taylor then rushed out and struck him, knocking him down, after which he was kicked and beaten by the brutal trio. His appearance is sufficient evidence of the truthfulness of his story.

LOOKING TO THE PUBLIC SAFETY.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Portland board of fire commissioners, held last Friday evening, the chief engineer was directed to see that the owners or agents of public buildings comply with section 25 of ordinance 2810. This reads as follows, which is of interest to everyone: "That all churches, hotels, halls theaters and and all other buildings used for public assemblages, shall have such means of ingress and egress as the board of fire commissioners shall approve, and all doors to the main entrance in such buildings shall open both outwardly and inwardly when said board of fire commissioners in writing so direct, and all doors and means of egress in the above-named buildings that are used for assemblages of any kind shall be kept unfastened, so as to be immediately opened if necessary, and until such assemblages have entirely dispersed, and all buildings hereafter erected, altered or changed and intended for the above purposes, shall have the main aisles and passage-ways at least four feet in width, provided that all main entrances to such buildings hereafter erected with the exception of churches, shall not be less than twelve feet in width."

FIGURES ON TOBACCO.

The amount refunded to dealers in tobacco and cigars, as rebate, will amount to about $50,000. Persons who have plenty of time can amuse themselves in figuring up what the rebate in the whole union will amount to. From this they can approximate the value of all the tobacco used in the United States, and can calculate how much good whisky the money would buy. Our statistics reporter has worked out the usual curious calculations. When it comes to facts this paper is not going to be left. If the tobacco on which rebate was paid in this state was made into thin, narrow plugs that is thin and narrow enough, and placed end to end, it would reach around the world twice and leave enough over to tie into a double bow knot. If all this tobacco was sold at retail it would amount to almost enough to pay lawyers fees and cost of the plaintiff in the injunction suit against the bridge. If made into cigarettes it would supply Freddie Gebhardt and his associate dudes until the style changed and dudes became simply or simple, plain ordinary fools that they were formerly. If this tobacco was again sold at the usual retail rates it would build and inclose an orphan asylum for "millions yet unborn" of foundlings. Provided however, that too many of said foundlings were not born at or near the same time, and also barring twins and triplets as the case may be. If this tobacco be made into smoking and chewing tobacco cigars, cigarettes and snuff etc it will all be used up in course of time. This last conclusion is supposed by many to be the most likely of all. In the meantime consumers would like to know how the rebate helps them as prices have not changed. This measure seems to be a tariff for revenue only for dealers

THE CONGREGATIONAL CONCERT

The concert at the church on Friday night was a most gratifying success and too much praise cannot be given to Mr Donaldson, the able director who gave us an evening of so much good music. Miss Emma M [illegible] showed plainly that she had not wasted her time while under the tuition of Mrs Marriner Campbell in San Francisco. Her solo was very well rendered. Prof G W Jackson sang twice and while he forces his voice a little too much yet he exhibited a degree of cultivation that has rarely been equaled here. Portland may congratulate herself on this addition to her musical talent. Mr A S Devoe charmed all with his rich bass voice and it is hoped he will be heard again. Miss [illegible] two recitations were fully appreciated. The programme was a long one and there was much that deserves praise. A large audience testified their appreciation by frequent applause

FIVE MONTHS IMMIGRATION

The heavy immigration and tonnage to Oregon and Washington territory, during the past month have continued unabated. Twenty three steamships of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Co. and the Coast Steamship Co and Oregon Improvement Co have brought from San Francisco during that time 1706 passengers and 29,840 tons of freight. This gives a total since Jan 1 of [illegible] passengers and [illegible] tons of freight, and shows an increase of [illegible] per cent in passenger business and [illegible] per cent on freight over the same period last year. As the number of passengers arriving from San Francisco is but a small part of the total travel, [illegible] immigration by ocean thus far in 1883 [illegible] to which must be added the large number coming in from the east. The ships of the Pacific Coast Co from San Francisco to Puget Sound and Victoria have been compelled to increase their trips from [illegible] times per month to weekly. Traffic to Alaska has also increased so as to demand [illegible] monthly steamers with full cargoes. [illegible] new canneries have been established. [illegible] rich discoveries in the mineral [illegible] of northern Idaho and Montana are attracting miners and prospectors from all parts. The crop reports from the section east of the Cascade mountains confirm the estimate of two hundred thousand tons of grain for the coming season.

YESTERDAY'S BOAT RACE

The race yesterday between two crews of the Portland Rowing Association was the most hotly contested and closest ever rowed in Oregon waters, and resulted in a victory for the old paper shell (Messrs White, Teal, the [illegible], Lush and Wallace) by a little more than one length. The day was very fine, the water smooth, and there was a large attendance of visitors, stretching all the way from Pine street to the water works. Boat No 2 (Messrs Malarkey, Henderson, Shindler and Goff's) had a little the best of the start and pulled steadily at forty three strokes to the minute, holding a slight lead to the bridge piers at Morrison street. Number 1 had the eastern course and pulled almost a tangent to the stake. [illegible] from forty three to [illegible]. [illegible] made the turn [illegible] and there was no perceptible advantage to either until the bridge was reached on the return. Here No 1's crew put on a hunk and forged ahead one length, holding it to the end of the course. Two's tried to make a spurt but they hadn't the wind though they kept up their regular stroke to the finish. The winning boat evidently had some reserve strength which they were not called on to use. The distance was two miles and the time of the winning boat 13 31¼

No Twos claim that they had to change their course to avoid being run over by the Jefferson street ferry, thus losing time. The new paper shell used by them is the heavier of the two but has a compensating advantage in being fitted with patent oar-locks.

Capt. White of No One used in the race a rather ingenious invention of his own. It is a double mirror fitted into an ordinary spectacle frame, which he wears as a pair of spectacles. He is thus enabled to see his course without turning around, and can ordinarily steer straight.

A FAILURE

For a long time an OREGONIAN reporter has been endeavoring to ascertain the true inward idea of the vacuum motor machine, invented by Oswald Seifert of Corvallis. He has traced the machine through its course of construction and forbore to say anything in regard to it till it should be completed and its failure or success proven. He has never been able to ascertain anything definite as to its workings but was assured by Seifert that it "went." A day or two since he was treated to a sight of the complete machine, which, it appears, has proved a failure. Mr Seifert acknowledged that he had found that it would not run with air as he had intended, but he was having another constructed to run with water. He attempted to give an explanation of the principle of the concern but failed to make himself intelligible. The draughtsmen who have drawn the plans for both his machines have assured him that there was nothing in them. He talks of a vacuum in a manner which indicates mental vacuity, to use a mild term. His idea is the old old one of inventing perpetual motion or, in other words, manufacturing power. He seeks to make a machine to turn an engine instead of an engine, furnished with power to turn a machine. The most astonishing thing about the whole business is the number of persons he has found willing to take stock in his project. The vacuum seems to have caught them and they take stock in the machine without understanding it. When Seifert failed to make the reporter comprehend the principle of the machine he remarked that he would like to have a person sent round who could understand the principle of a machine as well from his explanation as from seeing the machine working. Such a person has not yet been found and it is very doubtful if he ever will be. If anyone doubts the correctness of our statements in regard to the impracticability of the machine he can have them corroborated by every draughtsman and mechanic who has been employed upon it and the complete machine is ready to speak for itself.

THE FRECKLE-FACED GIRL

Her Pleasant Talks with Her Parents Acquaintance

Exchange

The freckle faced little girl was sent to Sabbath school last Sunday to counteract the effect of her remarks to the parson and show that the family was not quite as wicked as she made it appear. The teacher told the class about Jonah and in reply to an answer any question the children wanted to ask about the surprising adventures of the man who was thrown overboard for luck and swallowed by a whale. The little girl stopped making faces at the boy with the large ears in the next class and wanted to know [illegible] whale was in the [illegible]. The lady said that it [illegible] question, and taking special pride in her peculiar knack in drawing out children and analyzing the operations of their [illegible] minds she inquired the reason of the [illegible].

I didn't know [illegible] the freckle faced girl [illegible] my pa [illegible] whale at [illegible] Mr Jones [illegible] at Parker's [illegible] with at one sitting [illegible] some whales [illegible]

It's high time your mother [illegible] Sabbath school, replied the teacher severely. The influences around you at home are [illegible] for a child of your age [illegible] naturally wicked disposition. Where do you suppose you will go if you learn to talk such an awful about your [illegible]?

I dunno. Over to Miss [illegible] Ma says that she [illegible] to talk about the neighbors and [illegible] I can go too when I get big enough. I'd rather go to dancing [illegible] though [illegible] Deacon [illegible] cheated him out of that time they swapped horses.

The teacher told the freckle faced girl to stop talking and learn two verses and the little heathen hid her face behind her book and whispered to the next little girl whose father is the [illegible] boy [illegible] talk through his nose funny? My pa says that if your pa would stay at home from prayer meetin' [illegible] a little more sugar with the sand he sells for fourteen cents a pound [illegible] he might not need a fire proof coffin when he dies

Then she settled herself to making faces at the boy with the large ears and giggling at the way the teacher twisted her mouth trying to sing a hymn

The New Chinese Consul and his Quarters

NEW YORK June 2—The new Chinese consulate was opened here yesterday. The new consul Ou Leang Wing, who reached this city this morning from Washington is of medium height and build with a thin, intellectual face and quite pleasant manners. He speaks little English but relies mainly upon his interpreter. The house is a substantial four story building, with heavy mahogany doors, and has been refitted at a cost of $2,000. The furniture is of ebony, upholstered in crimson velvet, with raised figures, and large ebony framed pier glasses stand near the windows

Adulterated Lard Rejected.

CHICAGO, June 2.—McGeoch Everingham & Co one of the heaviest firms of operators on the Chicago board of trade, refused to accept the delivery of 10,000 tierces of lard, representing $43 000 from Fowler Bros yesterday, claiming it was adulterated although it passed the usual inspection. McGeoch claims now, according to an interview this morning, that 10 000 tierces received from the same firm May 1, proved worthless and that $100 000 worth of adulterated lard is on the local markets

The "Morning Journal's" Libel Suit.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Army and Navy Improvements.

WASHINGTON, June 2—Last winter congress appropriated $1,000,000 for repairing four old monitors. To-day Secretary Chandler divided the sum into four equal parts, and awarded the contracts to John Roach of Chester William Cramp of Philadelphia, Theodore Hollingsworth of Wilmington and Secor of San Francisco. These men were favored contractors under the reign of Robeson. It is said the money first appropriated is inadequate, and that $3,000,000 will be required. The ordnance department has accepted the proposal of an eastern firm for the conversion of fifty ten inch smooth bore Rodman guns into eight inch muzzle-loading rifles, at a cost of $100 000. When Thompson was secretary of the navy he persuaded congress to appropriate $200,000 to establish a coaling station at Chiriqui bay Central America. This occasioned much criticism, and it was said would be a step in the direction of enforcing the Monroe doctrine on English and the French people

JOHN SHERMAN SPEAKS

The Most Serious of Our Divisions has Grown out of an Attempt to Nominate Gen Grant."

From the Sunday Oregonian

MANSFIELD O June 2. The Richland county republican convention met here to-day to elect delegates to the state convention [illegible] candidates for governor and other state [illegible] who [illegible] Senator Sherman was [illegible] chairman [illegible]. On taking the chair he made a speech. He said [illegible] the past national and state issues of the [illegible]

[illegible] the republican party has always been guided by correct principles and has fulfilled the purposes [illegible] our [illegible] adversaries. [illegible]

THE SITUATION IN OHIO

It has been said that [illegible] problems of civil government [illegible] foreign and [illegible] policy and [illegible] next year that will determine the fate of the [illegible] party. We have been weakened by our divisions [illegible] strength by states [illegible] our principles [illegible] The most serious of our divisions has grown out of an attempt to nominate General Grant for a third term which was greatly unfortunate for him and the republican party but it never weakened in the slightest degree my abiding faith in his patriotism nor diminished my estimate of the value of his services to his country during the war. No man living has done more for his country and no one [illegible] with the public can heap upon him can equal the value of his services but in the mind of the great masses of his countrymen the evil example of too long a continuance of power of a president in a single person there was danger so great that even in the case of General Grant it was not wise to make it. This was the question settled by the Chicago convention and should no more be made the cause of division than the failure to nominate any other candidate. Upon questions of principles that divide parties there are really no vital differences of opinion in the republican party. On details more [illegible] What is now the question upon which [illegible]

THE CONTEST THIS FALL

Will depend is. Shall our tariff laws be framed with a view to protect labor as well as to levy taxes. On this question we are united and indisputably right. It is the fundamental national question of the time which will engross the attention of the next congress and be the pivotal issue on which the presidential election will turn. We, as a party, maintain that while the main object of taxes on imported goods is to furnish a revenue for the support of the government yet that in laying them special care should be taken to foster build up and protect such manufactures agricultural or production as are suited to our climate and to the habits of our people, with a view to secure to our artisans fair wages for a good day's labor for our farmers a home market for their productions and to our country strength, wealth and independence. This is the chosen position of the republican party. Upon it we invite a contest with our democratic friends whenever, if ever, they make up their minds upon the subject. Another question is: Shall the sale of spirituous and malt liquors be free and unrestrained in Ohio, or shall it pay for the maintenance of our courts poorhouses, local peace, and for the loss it puts upon the victims of a diseased appetite, and upon their wives and children. The republican legislature has embodied its view of what is right and just in what is called

THE SCOTT LAW

We must stand or fall by that law, and upon the justice of the taxes it imposes. It declares that an annual tax of $200 shall be imposed upon all persons who sell spirituous liquors in Ohio, and $100 on all who sell malt liquors. Is this a wise and just measure? I believe it is. Tax on the sale of liquors now exists in nearly every state in the Union and in some states at a rate far higher than the rate proposed. There is not a country in Europe or in the regions anywhere of the civilized world where some form of taxation is not levied upon the sale of liquors. Republicans favor the Scott law. They make it a part of their platform. They mean to enforce it. They are opposed to its repeal. They invite the democracy to

MEET THEM MANFULLY

In this issue and stake the judgment of the people upon it. We may lose some votes but the republican party, in all its brilliant history was never more clearly right than when it demands of those who sell liquors as a beverage to pay the police a tax to meet the expenses caused by their traffic and being right we are certain to win, if we have the courage to fight and the wisdom to unite with all those who agree with us

At the conclusion of this address the convention unanimously adopted resolutions in favor of a protective tariff and the taxation of the liquor traffic

The Anti-Railroad Demonstration at San Jose.

SAN FRANCISCO June 2—The anti railroad demonstration at San Jose to-day was not so largely attended as was expected. Archer was the first to speak. He explained that the meeting had been called to expostulate with the railroad commissioners for violating their pledges. He denounced the extortions of the railroad company and declared it time for the people to assert their rights. Gen Naglee next appeared and read the resolutions. They set forth the exactions of the railroads and demand that the railroad commissioners should keep their pledges and fix fares at 3 cents a mile and freights 2 cents a ton per mile before June 15. If they do not do so a committee is named to call on Stoneman and ask him to call an extra session of the legislature, when the commissioners can be impeached.

FRANCE

FRANCE SHOULD SMOOTH THE DIFFERENCE.

PARIS June 2—In the senate to-day Challemel Lacour minister of foreign affairs replying to a question of Comte de St Vallier, said all necessary measures will be taken to insure the success of the expedition against Tonquin. By the end of the month he stated there would be a small army there capable of coping with any difficulty. The government must endeavor to smooth the difference with China. There was no reason to believe that the country would seek a rupture with France, or that she would intervene where she had no right or interest.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOSCOW

MOSCOW, June 2—At the ball given by General Von Schweinitz, German ambassador, last evening, the emperor and grand dukes appeared in the uniform of German officers, also wearing their German orders

It is stated that the mayor of Moscow intends to resign in consequence of the disapproval that has been expressed of a speech which he delivered at the banquet given to the mayors of cities.

The city is almost empty of people to-day, owing to the great part of the population having gone to Petroffsky park to partake in an immense fete there in honor of the coronation of the czar. The emperor will visit the park this afternoon

ONE MILLION PEOPLE AT THE FETE

MOSCOW, June 2—The fete at Petroffsky park to-day was on a colossal scale. The land upon which the entertainment was given embraced about 100 hectares. There were four immense theatres, in which were given a circus performance, ballets, pantomimes and processions of horsemen. It is estimated that fully a million persons were at the fete. One hundred and forty wagons loaded with barrels of beer arrived on the ground during the morning, and by noon all this supply was exhausted. The czar and the czarina on their arrival in the park were received with deafening cheers. A large number of peasants had walked from distant provinces to attend the fete. One feature of this immense gathering was the lack of disturbances, the people throughout the day behaving in the most orderly manner

Building Slow Cruisers.

Pittsburg Dispatch

The advertisement of the secretary of the navy for the construction of the new steel cruisers contains a promise that, as usual in the present policy of naval expenditures, the money will be thrown away before work is commenced. The advertisement calls for the construction of vessels with a speed of fifteen knots per hour. This is an advance upon the rate of speed of most of the old navy, but is still far below what is needed to make these cruisers valuable

The very idea of a cruiser demands that it shall be able to overtake and capture the enemy's merchant marine, and to find safety in its speed when confronted by a superior force of war vessels. Now among the European steamships of late construction, the rate of seventeen knots is very often attained and it is safe to say that not many years will pass before that will be an average speed. In the English navy are two or three vessels of a speed of nineteen knots. The spectacle of a fifteen-knot American cruiser in case of a war with England, trying to catch seventeen knot English merchant vessels or to escape from nineteen knot English frigates would be a remarkable monument to Secretary Chandler's lack of foresight and administrative ability

An eminent naval authority, Lieutenant Gorringe, who is engaged in the construction of vessels, says that cruisers can be built with a guaranteed speed of twenty knots. Such vessels would be of value to the country in the event of war. It certainly is necessary that whatever additions are made to our navy should be of the best character and as speed is the essential quality of the cruisers now to be constructed, the highest attainment possible in the line should be demanded

The expenditure of money for the improvement of the American navy will command popular support. But its expenditure for the purpose of giving fat contracts to Roach and the Cramps, or such terms as to carefully preserve our present naval inferiority cannot be too promptly exposed or severely denounced

People flocked to Scragg End from far and near to hear the new minister, at first with much the same curiosity that they would have shown to see a white elephant, but soon for the sake of the preaching. Nobody could quite ex- plain Miss Barton's popularity. Perhaps old Mrs. Simmons came as near to the truth as anybody when she said "she wasn't any smarter than anybody else, but someway she seemed just like own folks. And she knew just how folks felt without being told."

Ponkapawket was scandalized. It was a disgrace to the whole town to have a woman preacher holding forth every Sunday, and drawing such crowds—drawing half the congregation away from the Ponkapawket church, too! The deacons requested Mr. Ericson to preach a sermon from the text: "Let your women keep silence in the churches."

Mr. Ericson was known to hold the Woman's Rights movement in contempt; but he had been twice to hear Miss Barton preach, when there were no services in his own church, and he had also called upon her several times, and when the deacons conferred with him about preaching that sermon they found it impossible to obtain any satisfaction; he was very polite, and he did not say that he would not, but "he smiling put the question by."

One day he surprised Miss Barton by inviting her to an exchange of pulpits for the following Sunday; but that was in harvest time, and she had come to Scragg End in June. Even Ponkapawket had become accustomed to the idea of a woman preacher, if it did not approve of it.

He had found her sitting on the piazza on a warm afternoon in late September. She had a large basketful of stockings beside her, and was darning them diligently. Some were her own, some were Adoniram Hewitt's and Lysander's, for Roxy had gone away on a visit, and Mrs. Hewitt's hands were more than full. She looked as housewifely as if she had never aimed at any wider sphere.

The shadow of a smile thickened about Mr. Ericson's mouth as he observed her employment. Although Miss Barton looked up only as much as politeness required, she saw the smile, and it brought a flush to her cheek. Though she looked so strong and resolute, it was evident that Miss Barton was keenly sensitive.

He sat down beside her, and immediately proffered his request, perhaps as an antidote to the smile

"Your people would be shocked. They don't approve of me," said Miss Barton.

"I never suspected you of any want of courage," said Mr. Ericson.

"I am a dreadful coward. I don't think I fully realized it when I began. If I had been sent anywhere but to Scragg End, I don't know what I should have done. Here they are humble-minded people, without strong prejudices, and I do seem to have found the way to their hearts. But I am afraid I should never dare to enter another pulpit—certainly not yours at Ponkapawket."

"You would soon conquer there as you have conquered here, said Mr. Ericson.

"I couldn't endure their unfriendly gaze. I should display all my womanishness. I should blush, I should tremble, I might faint. I should be a stumbling-block to the women who are following in the same pathway. I don't mean to be that. My work in Scragg End suffices me, and I am so thankful for it."

"I am sorry you feel so about Ponkapawket, because I have a proposition in my mind much more audacious than the one that I made," said Mr. Ericson.

Miss Barton raised her eyes inquiringly, and dropped them again instantly under the minister's gaze.

"I thought we might unite the churches." Mr. Ericson's voice trembled a little, as if he were afraid.

"I don't see how it could be done," said Miss Barton, frigidly.

"Of course there is but one way," said Mr. Ericson, quietly. "I dared not ask you to be my wife without suggesting to you the fact that your work need not be given up."

The girl rose to her feet. Lysander's stocking fell from her hand, and was blown away by the wind, unheeded. "I don't know what I have done to deserve this—this insult. I thought that at least you respected me, and I thought my calling made me sacred from such—such attacks altogether."

"I am sorry that you should think it an insult. I can hardly see how a man could give you a better proof of his respect than to ask you to become his wife. And as for your calling making you sacred, we don't believe in the celibacy of the clergy, you know." In spite of his evident mortification and distress, there was a sly twinkle in Mr. Ericson's eye as he said that.

"But I—I am a woman," said Miss Barton, sitting down again, and covering her face with her hands.

"The more reason why you should be married," said Mr. Ericson, calmly. "You need a protector."

"I am perfectly sufficient for myself. And I shall never care for anybody—anything—but my work."

Mr. Ericson arose. "I am sorry to have troubled you," he said gently. "I love you, and I have never known what it was to love a woman before; that is all my excuse."

Miss Barton watched him as he went down the road, with the yellow leaves falling upon him. She observed, as she never had done before, how finely his head was set upon his broad shoulders, what a manly grace there was about his strong, well-knit figure.

"But he has no business to love me," she said, drawing her brows into a tight frown.

Then suddenly she remembered Lysander's stocking, and went down in the grass to look for it. It had blown over the fence into the field. She stretched her arm between the slats and drew it back. As she did so she caught sight of Lysander. He was gathering squashes and pumpkins on the little south hill; she saw his figure in silhouette against the sky. He started to come toward the house, and she waited for him—waited until a sudden thought sent a flame of color over her face.

"It can't be—" she said, half-aloud, inquiringly. "I will keep that out of my life. I won't be a failure! I won't be!" And she rushed up to her room and locked herself in.

She came down as calm and grave as ever when the tea-bell rang, and after tea she and Lysander read their daily quantity of Greek, for Lysander was pursuing his studies with renewed avidity since he had a companion to help him, and had not yet given up his long-cherished hope of studying for the ministry, though there seemed no prospect of his being able to leave the farm.

After that day Miss Barton devoted herself more zealously than ever to her work. She darned no more stockings. When she was not writing her sermons, she was visiting the sick and the poor, and making, or suggesting and inducing others to make, improvements, sanitary and moral as well as religious.

"She was practical and efficient as if she was not a woman," many people said, and old Jeremy Grimes, who had wished to tell her when she came that they did not want a woman preacher, said: "They couldn't have had such women in St. Paul's time, or he never would have written what he did."

But Mrs. Hewitt had a grievance. Miss Barton didn't seem to make herself one of the family as she used to. She was shut up in her own room almost all the time now, and she and Lysander didn't seem to get along together as they used to. She never came into the kitchen and wanted to help make cake now, or sat with them around the fire in the evening while Lysander read aloud. She "didn't seem to have anything against them, but she wasn't free and sociable any more."

Lysander was teaching school this winter and attending to the farm work in his leisure time. His habit of studying with Miss Barton had gradually died out. To his mother's persistent questionings Lysander replied that neither of them had any time for it now

Mrs. Hewitt could not make it out. "Pa," who prided himself on being long-headed, hinted that he could, but he would not say outright what he thought, and his wife regarded hints with lofty scorn.

One afternoon, after school hours, Lysander went down to the woods back of the house to superintend the operations of some men who were cutting timber. Just at dusk Miss Barton, coming home from a visit to a sick parishioner, encountered four men carrying on an improvised stretcher Lysander's apparently lifeless body. He was lying white and rigid, and there were scarlet spots upon the ground all the way that he had come. Down on her knees in the snow fell Miss Barton, and threw her arms around him.

"Oh, my love! my love! have you gone so far away that you cannot hear me say I do love you?" she cried. "I was cold and hard because I thought it was my duty, but if you could only come back—"

And then they had to raise Miss Barton and carry her into the house, for she had fainted.

"That's just what I could have told you a good while ago if I had had a mind to," said "Pa," as he rehearsed the scene to his wife an hour afterward. "She's a terrible sight like a woman if she is a minister. And Lysander—well, I calculate he won't complain of having his foot cut, if it does lay him up for a while. I can't say whether she'll let him do the preaching, or whether they'll both do it, but you'll see them married before summer."

"I don't want anybody to think it's because I'm a woman," said Miss Barton, rather inconsequently, when Lysander led her, blushing and tearful, to his mother's arms. "But I didn't seem able to help it. And Lysander says I needn't give up my work."—Harper's Bazar.

New Way of Marrying for Money.

The proverb which warns us that it is possible to have too much of a good thing received a probably unique illustration in the recent conduct of a French couple of the name of Chetoo, who are at present occupying cells in two of the prisons of Paris. There exists, it seems, a religious society in the French capital called the society of St. Francois Regis, the object of which is to encourage couples belonging to the poorer classes to supplement the civil marriage before the Mayor, which is deemed sufficient in a great many cases, with the religious rite in the church; and small prizes are given to stimulate the better feelings of the lukewarm. It occurred to Cheton and his wife, who were regularly married last December, both by priest and Mayor, that they could make a few francs by representing to the society that they had not invoked the blessing of the church on their union, and offering to do so for a consideration. The society then made them a grant of five francs, and the religious ceremony was duly solemnized in the church—not the same as that in which they were first married—and at the time appointed. Unfortunately for this ingenious couple, their fraud was discovered. They were prosecuted for obtaining money under false pretenses, and they have just been sentenced, the husband to eight, the wife to six months' imprisonment.—St. James Gazette.

There's No Use Bucking Against Solid Facts.

A farmer came into a grocery store the other day and exhibited to the eyes of an admiring crowd an enormous egg, about six inches long, which he avowed to have been laid by one of his own hens. He had it packed in cotton and wouldn't allow anyone to handle it for fear of breaking the phenomenon. The groceryman examined it with the rest, and, intending to chaff the countryman, said:

"Pshaw! I've got something in the egg line that will beat that."

"I'll bet you five dollars you haven't!" said the countryman, getting excited.

"Take it up," replied the groceryman, and going behind the counter he brought out a wire egg-beater. "There is something in the egg line that will beat it, I guess," said he, reaching out for the stakes.

"Hold on there," said the farmer; "let's see you beat it," and he handed it to the grocer. The latter held out his hand for it, but dropped it in surprise on the counter, where it broke two soup plates and a platter. It was of solid iron, painted white.

"Some folks think they're darnation cute," murmured the farmer as he pocketed the stakes and lit out, "but 'tain't no use buckin' against the solid facts.—Detroit Chaff.

After the ceremony, during which she still wore the mask, they drove her to her rich home, and after withdrawing for a few moments she returned and at once captivated her husband by her beauty and tasteful dress.

What a Farmer Needs.

A farmer needs his vacation just as much as any man of business needs one. A week's run to town after the busy season is over will do him a world of good. And they need to visit other farmers, to learn, if possible easier or better methods of farming or of living. They need to attend farmers' conventions and organizations to gain new ideas—something to broaden or enlarge their views of life. People who always stay at home are sure to seek dark sides and shadows of their own lives. They need to learn and to realize that storms and droughts and thunders and showers and freshets visit other farms beside their own; that weeds and insects thrive in all degrees of longitude; that flies and dirt accumulate and annoy other households beside the ones that they preside over. In short, they need to learn how other people live. Could farmers manage so as to be confined less to their farms, could they work more in partnership, as do men in other business, or could they believe it profitable to employ a higher grade of laborers—men whom they could trust alone for a day or week, or could they earlier train their sons and daughters to have a care and an interest in the affairs of the household, then they could oftener find the opportunity for leaving the farm for a short season of recreation and enjoyment, and thus be in reality what they have the name of being, the most independent class of people in the world.

"What fever?" inquired the clerk.

"The faver 'nagur,' replied the woman. "And yees should see poor Patrick shake. He hasn't a tooth left, and but for the chapeness of shad we would not be able to kape his clothes on."

The woman got the quinine which she wanted

WOMAN'S FRIEND.

Having been troubled for many years with kidney disease, with severe pains in my back and limbs—my ankles were at times very badly swollen. I procured a [illegible] and had not used one-half of the bottle before I began to be better, no pain in the back, and the swelling of my ankles commenced to go down, and my appetite was much better, for I had become satisfied that all I ate distressed me very much. It was really dyspepsia, combined with the other troubles, and I have used four bottles, and am able to do my work and attend to household duties which before had been a burden to me, and I can only thank Hunt's Remedy for the health and happiness which I now enjoy, and esteem it a great privilege and duty to give you this letter in behalf of my many suffering lady friends, in Boston and the country, and can only say in conclusion that if you once try it you will be convinced as I was, even against my own will, that Hunt's Remedy is indeed a woman's friend.

UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE,
SILETZ INDIAN AGENCY,
TOLEDO, Oregon, May 28, 1883.

SEALED PROPOSALS IN TRIPLICATE INdorsed "proposals for the erection of boarding school buildings at the Agency, in accordance with plans and specifications on file at this Agency and also in the office of the PORTLAND OREGONIAN, San Francisco Alta, Salem Oregon Statesman, will be received at this Agency until 12 o'clock on Saturday, the 23d day of June, 1883.

The contract will be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, subject to the approval of the Department of the Interior. Proposals must state length of time required for completion of buildings after approval of contract, and must be accompanied by a certified check upon some United States depository, payable to the order of the undersigned, for at least five (5) per cent of the amount of the proposal, which check shall be forfeited to the United States in case any bidder receiving the award shall fail to execute promptly a contract with good and sufficient sureties, according to the terms of his bid, otherwise to be returned to the bidder. The contractor will be allowed the use of the Agency mill to cut such lumber as may be necessary, and the timber therefor may be cut upon the Reservation at such points as the agent may designate. All the labor of cutting timber and operating the mill to be hired by the contractor, and the mill to be turned back in as good order as when received by him. The contractor will be expected to employ the Agency Indians in every capacity possible.

The contractor to furnish all materials except lead and tiles, which will be furnished by the Agency.

The contract may provide for four payments, these to be made at such stages of the work as will fully protect the United States. The last payment to be made when buildings are accepted. The boarding house building will be 44x30 feet, with two wings 34x20 feet, each two stories.

The school building will be 30x50 feet and one story.

The right to reject any and all bids is hereby reserved.

For further information address the undersigned, at Siletz Agency, Toledo, Oregon.

THE BRIDGE INJUNCTION.

The parties who are applying for an injunction to restrain the Northern Pacific Railroad Company from erecting a bridge across the Willamette river at this city deny that the company has a right under its charter to bridge navigable streams and insist that it must go to congress to obtain such right by express enactment. On the other hand the company claims that the authority given by its charter to build a railroad from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, with a branch down the Columbia river to a point at or near Portland, carries by necessary inference the right to bridge all streams on the route, including the Willamette. The question, then, is one of legal construction or interpretation. The company hitherto has bridged such streams as it has encountered on its route without securing special acts therefor and without hindrance from any quarter. The most conspicuous instance is the bridge over the Missouri river at Bismarck, Dak. The Yellowstone, the Upper Missouri and Clark's fork of the Columbia, likewise navigable streams, have all been bridged under the general authority conveyed by the charter. If it be answered that the Willamette is the only one of these streams accessible from the ocean the reply is that this fact would make no difference in the legal aspects of the case. There is no right to throw a bridge across any navigable stream without consent of congress first obtained.

If there be any doubt of the right of the Northern Pacific to construct bridges over navigable streams on its line it certainly would be well to have the question definitely settled before the Willamette bridge is erected, or before construction is well under way. This journal believes and has steadily held that the company has the right. If, however, it has not, it would be better to know the fact now than to ascertain it at a later day. The piers in the river at the foot of Morrison street are a monument of ill-advised action in this particular, and no one would be glad to see another. Now that proceedings are to be taken to test the right of the Northern Pacific, it cannot be amiss to say that impatient denunciation of the parties who are moving in the matter will do no good. An issue can easily be reached before the court. It ought not to take any considerable length of time to argue the question and get from the court an opinion as to the right claimed on the one side and denied on the other. Whether a determination will be reached speedily or not will probably depend in no small degree upon the directness with which the issue is presented and met. Preliminaries may be cut short, and irrelevant matters excluded; and then there need be no delay.

It may be proper to say that Judge Williams appears in the case not as a principal, as might be inferred from an item which appeared in THE OREGONIAN on Saturday, but as an attorney employed for the purpose by Mr. Ellis G. Hughes, who is the principal mover for the injunction. Since it has been alleged that Judge Williams is acting in the matter for the Central Pacific railroad company, and that he is one of that company's favorites, it may be proper, too, as it is certainly just, to say that the Central Pacific and himself have ever been in antagonism and disagreement, that he has never acted for the Central Pacific in any case or for any purpose, but has steadfastly opposed its whole policy and all its schemes. It is proper, too, to say this, lest some might be led to suppose that the attempt to secure an injunction against construction of the Northern Pacific bridge at this city was inspired and directed by a rival railroad company. Mr. Hughes, it is understood, claims to be acting primarily for his own interest, alleging that a large property belonging to him will be injured by construction of the bridge at the point proposed. The public will regret that he takes this view of the case; and yet after all if there be any question as to the right to build the bridge, it ought certainly to be settled in advance of the construction. An amicable suit to settle an important matter upon which rights are not well defined, and where certainty is essential—though we have no reason to suppose this is such a suit—is often dictated by prudential considerations. What is now desirable in this case is that no obstacle be thrown in the way of a speedy decision upon it.

FURNITURE MANUFACTURE.

The success of three or four factories at or near Portland running through a course of years, has demonstrated that there is profit in the manufacture of furniture to be sold in the Oregon market in competition with eastern goods brought across the continent. So bulky a freight as furniture must pay a rate from the east very heavy in proportion to its value, and this heavy rate affords a margin which much more than covers the increased charges of manufacture here. Most of the furniture made in Oregon is of the cheaper sort, for which there is a wide sale, while much of the fine furniture of which many thousands of dollars worth is sold each year in Portland alone, is brought from the east. The advantage of freights is proportionately less in the higher priced goods, and the heavy cost of material, which, for the manufacture of fine furniture is brought all the way from the east, almost wholly overcomes it. For common furniture Oregon woods are used. White ash, a cheap, easily worked and durable timber is made into bedroom sets, chairs, tables and many other articles; but, singularly, the various fine woods, of which there are twenty or more varieties, are neglected. A few trifles are made of maple burl, a beautiful wood, finely adapted for panel work, but being an excrescence upon trees rather than a timber of itself, it cannot be procured cheaply or in proper sizes for general furniture. There grows in the coast counties of southern Oregon, in great quantity and in large straight trees, a wood which ought to be introduced here and which we believe would drive the the eastern dark woods out of the market. It has the dark richness of rosewood, irregularly streaked with lighter veins, is hard as hickory and is susceptible of a perfect polish. It is as much finer than black walnut as walnut is finer than red fir. Samples of it in use at Marshfield and Empire City, in Coos county, invariably attract the admiration of visitors. This timber—the myrtle—grows in vast areas and so near the streams that it can be secured in any quantity desired. We should be glad if some of our local furniture men would see what can be done with it.

General Grant comes of good healthy stock. His aged mother's death, which was announced by telegraph a few day's ago, was the mere stopping, without noise or jar, of a worn out machine. An eastern paper, writing of it, says that she arose in the morning, walked about in her usual health, read the newspaper and talked with her daughter. About noon, remarking that somehow she felt unusually weak, she lay down; a few minutes later she complained of a feeling of faintness but no pain; five minutes later she became unconscious, and within half an hour from the time she lay down, the final sleep had come. It was a natural death, and came as it was designed all men should die.

PARTY POLICY.

Senator Sherman, of Ohio, in speaking for the Republicans of his state, says that the policy of the party is taxation of the liquor traffic and maintenance of a protective tariff. These two things have no necessary connection; indeed, they are wholly incongruous and except for the peculiar conditions that exist in Ohio, would never be coupled together. Not much trouble will be encountered in an effort to unite Republicans upon a proposition to tax the liquor traffic, but there is not similar unity upon that tariff policy that goes under the name of protection. While there are few Republicans who can be classed as free-traders, in the broad sense of that term, there are multitudes who think the policy of protection has been pushed to extremes, and who would be glad to see a very considerable modification of it. Nearly all the great Republican papers of the country take this view of the subject. Yet it is doubtful whether such modification of the tariff can be secured for a long time to come. Protection is intrenched in the interests of large classes in many of the great states, and the election of 1880 showed that no party could carry them which uttered a menace against it. But the system is one that bears as hard upon the non-manufacturing parts of the country as it is favorable to the interests of those localities where manufactures have become established. The law of equilibrium enforces itself, and all that the manufacturers of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Massachusetts make out of the high markets which protection assures to them, their customers, the buyers and consumers, are required to pay. There are influences which make it exceedingly difficult, indeed nearly impossible, to secure any reduction of the tariff, even in those parts where the monopoly features are the worst. The reform, therefore, will be slowly gained. It comes the more slowly for the reason that the tariff as it is has long had the support of those large classes who associated in the other measures of the war for the union. Again, it was enacted by a rebellion congress, and for a score of years has been maintained by successive majorities of that party. These things have operated powerfully against any careful consideration of the question on its own merits. Yet nothing is more certain than that a more liberal policy in regard to foreign trade will in the long run prevail. The needs of the country demand it, since the unprotected and really hampered industries are every year becoming more numerous, extensive, valuable and powerful.

CROOK'S CAMPAIGN.

News from General Crook is meagre and so unsatisfactory in its sources that there is some ground for apprehension. The best judgment, however, in and out of the army, is that he is safe and that he will come out completely victorious over the Indians. The war against the Apaches has become one of extermination. For fifty years they have pursued a career of murder and outrage atrocious beyond description and unparalleled in the history of Indian warfare. The government has tried vainly every possible means for the pacification of these savage people; but they have abused every kindness tendered them and violated every pledge they have made. Recently their women and children were killed by Mexican troops, who pursue savage warfare in a savage way, and as a result, the spirit of desperation has taken possession of them. They expect no quarter and will fight till the last warrior dies. That Crook will wipe them from the face of the earth is devoutly to be hoped. It is a surprise to learn that the wilderness in which our troops have plunged out of sight was, long ago, thickly populated and covered with farms and vineyards, but such, the Salt Lake Tribune says, is the fact. The country was rich and prosperous when Mexico was a province of Spain, but taking advantage of the turbulence which followed the surrender of Spanish authority on the frontier, the savages commenced first to steal stock and then to carry off women and children, and growing more and more bold with success, and the people becoming more and more cowed by the swiftness and precision of their attacks, they at last became the masters and took what they pleased, the only defense attempted being to rush into their houses and barricade doors and windows. Finally the fear and loss became intolerable and one after another the villages were deserted and the country left to go to waste.

The Pittsburg Dispatch tells of an upright judge in Allegheny county, Pa., White by name. It seems that the judge went fishing in the Ohio river for jack salmon recently under the belief that jack salmon were in season. Owing to the inherent perversity of the finny tribe, a fine black bass persisted in impaling itself on the judge's hook, regardless of the fact that it was violating the law in allowing itself to be caught before the 1st of June. When Judge White's attention was called to the matter, he vindicated the law by promptly appearing before himself and pleading guilty to a violation of the game law. The judge then proceeded to fine himself $10, but in view of the fact that this was supposed to be the first offense, he remitted the costs. He escaped the disagreeable necessity of committing himself until the fine was paid by promptly paying it to himself as the court.

An order has been issued to postmasters informing them that if they do not give personal attention to the duties of their offices they will be dismissed. The order is timely. It ought to include a case not far from the latitude of Portland, where a postmaster for months past has spent four-fifths of his time in the office of a ring newspaper and employed all the feeble efforts he is capable of exerting upon anything in abortive attempts to "boom" the said organ, while the business of the post-office has been neglected and the people have made complaints in vain.

DESTRUCTIVE BRUSH FIRE.—With the intention of burning a few piles of brush, a fire was lighted in the woods near the bank of the Willamette, about four miles south of Portland, a few days ago. The result was most disastrous. A large amount of wood, several thousand cords, but recently cut, was lying piled near the fire and was discovered to be in flames when it was too late to save a large portion from destruction. About three thousand cords were consumed, belonging to Messrs. Abernethy and Bell, and the Oregon Iron Company. Besides the wood the company had a large lot of charcoal burned ready for the blast furnace at Oswego, 2,000 bushels of which were destroyed, together with several pits that had just been fired. The only insurance upon this great loss was upon 400 cords of wood, the property of Mr. Bell.

DEXTER'S ARREST.—Referring to a local item in THE OREGONIAN of Thursday last, relative to the capture of Bob. Dexter who sold whisky to the Indians who killed Mulhoren, a correspondent at Umatilla writes: When Dexter broke jail, Sheriff Martin offered $50 for his capture and extended double the amount of his own means to rearrest him but did not succeed. On May 5 he received the following telegram: "Dalles, Or., May 23, 1883. To sheriff Umatilla county: How much reward for Robert Dexter's apprehension? Answer immediately. C. Jones." The answer returned was "$30 at the Dalles or $75 here." The reply of Jones was "Come by next train. I will turn him over to you in Portland." Now you tell where the modest demand came from "No payee big enough, no can have."

LARCENY BY BAILEE.—Constable Culver of East Portland arrested Dave Williams Saturday night on a warrant issued from Justice Davis's court charging him with larceny by bailee. It is alleged that while in the employ of Mr. Benton, the wood dealer, he collected bills to the amount of $35, which he appropriated to his own use. The constable not being on hand at Justice Davis's court when the complaint was entered, the Justice forwarded the warrant by complaint to Constable Culver, who made the arrest. At the prisoner's request, he was detained in the East Portland jail Saturday night under the surveillance of the marshal, and yesterday morning bail of $25 was given for his appearance at Justice Davis's court this morning at 9 o'clock.

INJURED CONDITION.—V. H. Dusenberry, the constable, who was bitten by a spider about a week ago is at the St. Vincent's Hospital, and erysipelas has set in and his right arm is fearfully swollen. He will probably lose his arm, and the poison may indeed prove fatal.

BRIEF MENTION.

George Hoyt, a son of Capt. H. L. Hoyt, has been appointed to a clerkship in the office of U. S. Hull Inspector Ferguson.

The Jefferson street ferry-boat will hereafter run until 9 o'clock in the evening. The keel for the new boat on this line was laid last week.

Ivanhoe lodge Knights of Pythias will hold a meeting to-night to perfect arrangements for visiting the grand lodge at The Dalles this week.

The boy McKenzie who had his foot crushed between bumpers at Albina, Saturday, is doing well and will not have to suffer amputation.

William Fliedner is talked of as a possible democratic candidate for councilman in the Third ward, with Vincent McCullough as an opponent.

An Italian resident of this city asks us to say that the unfortunate man who is to be hanged at Vancouver on the 29th inst. is not an Italian, as has been asserted.

An employe of Magoon's stables was kicked in the stomach by a horse Saturday night and was thought for a time to have been seriously injured, but he was on hand and went to work at the usual hour yesterday morning.

The proprietors of the Albina Herald have ceased the publication of that paper. It is rumored that John Angel withdrew his patronage from the Herald, and thus caused its collapse.

On exhibition in a First street show window is a handsome model of the steamship Queen of the Pacific. It is the property of Captain Alexander and was brought here on the last trip.

Improvements on Ladd's building, corner of Stark and Front streets, have been completed and the corner store is again filled with the goods of its former occupant, L. K. G. Smith.

It is now stated that the grand jury who indicted Carrie Bradley will come forward and testify to all the horrible details of the Brown murder, introducing things that were not brought out at the trial.

In Justice Davis' court, George F. Robertson brought suit against J. S. Sperry for $25, which money was alleged to be due for filing an abstract. Some irregularity was shown in the filing and the suit was decided in favor of defendant.

Late Saturday evening the big boat of the Stark street ferry line was laid up for a general cleaning out and overhauling of her boilers. The Eliza Ladd made trips yesterday, landing at M street. The big boat, now in first class order, resumed transportation last evening.

Everything seems quiet on the face of the ocean of politics, in spite of the impending storm of the June election. But there is a strong undercurrent already in motion, as is evinced by the many little knots of politicians, who gather here and there on corners, in hallways or in offices.

Word has been received at the O. & C. railroad office in this city that on Friday last the Chinese laborers at the front, near Julia who have been receiving 90 cents per day, struck for an advance to $1. Their demand not having been acceded to, they have refused to work and are now idle.

Lumber and other building materials now occupy a portion of C street, between Front and First, so as to render that thoroughfare almost impassable to teams. The city ordinances allow only half of a street to be so occupied in front of a building in course of erection, and this law should be enforced.

A VERY OLD RIDDLE.

COLVILLE, W. T., May 23.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Will you please solve the following riddle or offer it to your circle of literati who may be interested therein:

"'Twas whispered in heaven 'twas muttered in hell,
And echo caught softly the sound as it fell;
In the confines of earth 'twas permitted to rest,
And the depths of the ocean its presence confessed.
It was seen in the lightning and heard in the thunder;
'Twill be found in the spheres when all riven asunder.
It was given to man with his earliest breath,
It assists at his birth, and attends him in death,
Presides over his happiness, honor and health.
Is the prop of his house and the end of his wealth,
It begins every hope, every wish it must bound
And though unassuming, with monarchs is crowned.
In the heaps of the miser 'tis hoarded with care,
But is sure to be lost in the prodigal heir.
Without it the soldier and sailor may roam;
But woe to the wretch that expels it from home.
In the whispers of conscience its voice will be found
Nor e'er in the whirlwind of passion be drowned;
It softens the heart, and though deaf to the ear,
It will make it acutely and instantly hear.
But in shades let it rest, like an elegant flower;
Oh! breathe on it softly, it dies in an hour."

The above is found in Goodrich's Fifth Reader, but although I have shown it to several of our scholars in this valley, like the gentleman of no color, "they gave it up." TILLICUM.

[The above comes from an experienced school teacher and an old friend of THE OREGONIAN. It was opened by the state news editor, who remembered the answer after reading the first line. It was then passed around to every member of the staff, and all but one solved it before the third line was reached. Colville valley scholars are evidently not up in old riddles. The above is a companion piece to the conundrum, "When was beef the highest?" There is much of literary merit in the lines of the riddle however, and this was recognized by William Cullen Bryant, who has given it a place in his "Library of Poetry and Song."]

SCOT NO. TWO.

PORTLAND, Or., June 2, 1883.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

A gentleman calling himself "A Loyal Scot" seems to be somewhat offended at your remarks about the royal family.

I beg permission to remark that he is "off his base" in setting up that branch of the royal family (the prince of Wales) as an example of purity and godliness. If a common man were guilty of one half that he (the Prince) is, he would be stamped as a scamp and scoundrel, not fit to be in the company of respectable men. But of course he is the dead ned king of the greatest nation on the earth, and that is the reason some men cannot see anything bad or vulgar in him. The royal family needs ventilation as bad as any of its meanest subjects.

SCOT NO. TWO.

UNEXPECTED FAILURE.

The firm of Winn & Grosby, wholesale jewelers of San Francisco, having suspended payment, their entire stock was offered for sale, and Uncle Myers having put in the highest bid the goods all passed into his hands. The Queen of the Pacific brings up all the stock, which will be offered at 50 cents on the dollar at 183 First street.

"GUARDED DOORS."

Sermon by Rev. H. K. Hines at Hall Street M. E. Church Last Night.

The evening service at Hall street church was opened by a very interesting "service of song" at 7:30, led by Mrs. Johnson at the organ. At 8 o'clock Rev. H. K. Hines, D. D. the pastor, began the regular services, announcing as his subject

"GUARDED DOORS."

He read as his text, Job xxxviii. 17. "Hast thou seen the door of the shadow of death?"

Following is a brief synopsis of his discourse:

"There was a wail and a pathos in the words of Job away back in the dim ages of an antiquity that is misty with distance, that has struck a minor chord in the heart of all time. His heart was filled with sadness, and he sung that sadness into the ear of the generations. Into the fabric of his life many dark and few golden threads were spun. His face, for the most of his life, was turned toward clouded vistas, and down them, under its clouds, he wandered and wept, alone. A blighted home, a devastated estate, all dear things of life desolated, were dark, dark ruins in his path. In the grandeur and greatness of his sufferings he was isolated. They were his test, his trial, his crucible, out of the fires of which, at least—though after long simmering and refining—he came forth as burnished gold. Without these, he, the Job of the Bible, the great, sad, solemn, majestic figure that stands against the sky of the olden ages, and grows greater and grander as time recedes—without these he would not have been.

Many of Job's words are sleepless sentinels on the gates and at the critical passes of life. They are weighted with wisdom; filled with a far insight; they are more than words. Our secrets are uncovered by them, and they mirror us to ourselves as few other words ever did or can. Were they human only? Then it was a humanity that had already swung to the perihelion of its orbit in its mastery of mystery, in its sublimity of faith, in its ripeness of utterance, while yet humanity was young. Whether they were human or not we stop not now to argue. To us they are divine, and Job, in the specific line of life that he illustrated, an elder, incomparable in all the ages.

We have made these remarks simply as a prelude to a discourse that will lead you possibly slightly away from the literal import of this text. God is here speaking—"out of the whirlwind" he is speaking to Job. A valley, shadowy, mysterious, holding an undiscernable beyond, stretches before him. It is "the shadow of death." "Hast thou seen" its doors? said God. Do you know where and how men enter it? Do you know what entering it means? Do you know what these doors mean?

To us, to-night, these doors mean the doors to a sinful life; a sinful life means "the shadow of death."

The door stands at the entrance. It separates between that within, and that without. It shields the family circle, it wards away the spoiler. Its office is thus doubly important. And this leads me to say, first: The doors of home, of the home life are to be guarded. It is a great and noble work to reclaim lost and fallen men and women, wandering boys and girls, but is a greater and nobler work to keep them from falling. At the door of home stands guard a mother's heart; a cleared-eyed, vigilant sentinel that would even shield with the cover of her own life, if need be, the fruit of her own motherhood. But something more than mother-love must guard them. Wisdom, piety, prayer, all God's forces of spiritual help, must hold that guarding vigil. The literature, the conversations, the amusements, all that make home, must be guarded at the very door.

On that family tree in your parlor is a reddening bud of young life. If it is dwarfed in its growth of goodness because the sap of your own life that you pour into it has become soured and fetid, in vain will you look for other than fruits of bramble and thorn. The pure, white soul within your home is to be guarded from all touch of taint or, by and by, "with a knowledge greater than grief can tell," you will discern where the unguarded doors of the home-life have opened and fled.

The thousand ruined boys, the hundreds of ruined girls of this city have came out of the unguarded doors of some homes. * * * We need, then, to guard what enters the doors of our homes.

* * *

Secondly—There are doors all along the way—ill-famed doors—that we must guard. In olden times wisdom went forth, with a choir of virtues, and standing on the corners of the street, by the entering in of the paths, called to men and said, "Whoso is a fool let him turn in at these doors." The voice of wisdom still cries in the streets. Now, as then, ill-famed doors are open on every hand. The gambling parlor is a door. The dramshop is a door. The theater is a door. They are doors leading downward to the valley of death, to the depths of hell. Guard these doors. Guard the young against pressing their threshold with a single footfall. Guard them against the scenes of passion behind the footlights; against the secret behind the dance; against the nest of crested vipers behind the painted screen.

Let law guard these doors. The supreme duty of society is self-protection. The most valuable riches of a people are themselves. Venality, lust, avarice, would throw wide these doors of death to the thoughtless rush of human feet. * * *

Let love guard these doors. We have seen a mother pace the floor and weep and pray and wring her hands in agony because she knew her boy had entered within these dens. We have seen a mother in the city of Portland, wrapped in disguise, listen at the door of the saloon for the voice of her boy, or push the door a little ajar to find him if he were there. It was right. 'Twas love seeking lost love, lost purity, standing guard at midnight over the soul of her wandering boy.

If all the pure motherhood, and devoted wifehood, and trusting maidenhood of this city would enter a holy conspiracy and guard these doors with all the sacredness and vigilance of love; and law and its ministers give to them help and strength, what wonders of redemption would soon be wrought. * * * There are other doors to be guarded but we cannot tell you what they are to-night. I may tell you, however, that, guard them who will or may, your own vigilance, your own virtue, your own integrity, can be, at least, your only safe defense. A sinful life is ever in itself of its own wrong. Sin dazes and dwarfs all that remains of good in the soul. From the downward drift, Christ, and Christ alone, can save it. None but he can sweeten the embittered waters, or cool the heated, hissing fountains, or hush the stormy, sobbing seas of a sinful life. * * * The dying St. Bernard said: "Guard the doors, let none go in to-night." We take up his words. We place them over this door of home. Let only love and purity go in to-night. * * * We write them in fire over these doors to a sinful life. Let none go in to-night. "Who enters here leaves hope behind."

JOHN C. DAVENPORT.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

In several of the country papers of Oregon and Washington I notice items to the effect that the recent failure of John C. Davenport of Cheney was dishonorable and brought about by cards and whisky. Such is not the case, and nearly any old resident of the Willamette valley and the people of eastern Washington territory amongst whom Mr. Davenport has resided and transacted business for a number of years, will bear me out in the assertion that he has always borne the character of a strictly honest man and was never addicted to the vices of drink and cards. He was a bold business man and in many cases took chances that would have frightened the majority of financiers; but in his long career it may safely be asserted that no action of his ever savored of dishonesty. His boldness and goodness of heart brought about his failure but his assets are more than adequate to meet his liabilities, and if the property he has left is handled at all carefully it will satisfy all claims against him and leave a balance in his favor. If it is squandered in attorneys' fees and costs, of course the result cannot be so gratifying. From a personal knowledge of his affairs, I feel confident that an arrangement will soon be made with his creditors by which they will receive their money, dollar for dollar, and that in a very short time. The reports that he received a $6000 deposit the day before he closed the bank, and that he had absconded with $40,000, are utterly without foundation, and even now while his affairs are in bad condition, his creditors feel that they will suffer no loss; and in the event of his property failing to satisfy their demands, they know he will never rest easy until every dollar is paid.

For a week previous to his departure from Cheney he had seen ruin staring him in the face, and the supposition is that his gigantic efforts to overcome the irresistible had so affected his brain as to cause him to fly from the scene of his trouble without realizing the result of such actions. Had he remained he would have experienced no difficulty in settling his affairs, and it is to be hoped that kind providence will spare him to return and resume his life of usefulness in a community which so sadly misses him.

Very respectfully yours,
CHAS. B. HOPKINS.

THE EAST SIDE.

BOY DROWNED.

The practice of boys navigating the slough on frail rafts has resulted disastrously. Benny Shertle, aged about 6 years, met a watery grave Saturday evening while engaged in this practice in the Asylum slough, south of the L street bridge. It appears that he with another boy of about his own age were afloat on a single plank, about 2x12 and eight feet long, when Shertle fell overboard. The surviving boy, however, states they were on different planks when the accident occurred, but several persons testify to having seen them on the same plank, and their statements are corroborated by the fact that but one plank could be found in the vicinity of the accident as soon as it became known, this being the one the remaining boy had occupied and which he had managed to steer ashore. The accident occurred about 5 o'clock, but the boy gave no alarm at the time, and not until some hours later, when the continued absence of their son caused the alarm of his parents, did they hear of his fate from the boy with whom they knew to have been in his company. The mother could not at first believe the report, but on going to the bank of the slough and observing her boy's cap which had floated ashore, her anguish was heart-rending as she realized the sad truth. As soon as the fact became known willing men set to work dragging for the body and continued their labors till near midnight without success. The work of dragging was resumed yesterday morning by an increased number of men and continued throughout the day up till about 5:30 o'clock, when the body was brought to the surface on the grappling hooks being used by Thos. Gwinn. It was at once conveyed to the residence of the parents at the corner of Fifth and M streets and the coroner notified. Coroner Coyle promptly responded, but under the circumstances concluded that an inquest was not necessary. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ACCIDENT TO A HORSE.

A horse belonging to Church & Sodenj and being driven by Johnny Ross, met with a peculiar but painful accident Saturday. While engaged in plowing on Fifth street, north of L, which is being graded for the approach to the new bridge, the animal's head came in contact with a large nail that was protruding from a scantling attached to a fir tree. The nail caught in the flesh part of the head, immediately above and between the eyes, and the horse giving a jerk to free itself, had the effect of ripping open the skin as far back as the ears, making an ugly wound from which the blood flowed profusely. The suffering animal was taken to the city stables, where Mr. Stewart sewed up the wound. The wound was extremely sore yesterday, but no serious results are anticipated.

NOTES.

SALEM NOTES.

[OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

SALEM, June 2.

The students of the Willamette university are already decorating the chapel for their annual commencement exercises.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will entertain their friends with ice cream and other refreshments on Monday evening next.

Charles A. Brown of this city and Miss Emma Miller of the Waldo Hills were married on Wednesday last, Rev. T. H. Small officiating.

The committees appointed to solicit subscriptions for stock in the proposed woolen mill are meeting with very fair success and the chances are that the necessary amount will be pledged.

J. E. Helms, an employe at Swartz mill, near this city, was arrested yesterday on the charge of committing an indecent assault on his own daughter and awaits his preliminary examination.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sears lost their only daughter yesterday, she having died of lung fever. It is but a short time since they buried one of their children, and this second bereavement comes with double severity.

The Alka Hesperean and Athenaeum literary societies are billed for a first class entertainment to be given at Reed's opera house on Friday evening next, and assure its friends that "Your Life is in Danger" if you do not attend.

Protection Lodge No. 2 A. O. U. W., held its semi-annual election of officers last evening with the following result: D. A. Waller, P. M. W.; A. F. Wheeler, M. W.; J. G. Evans, G. F.; Allen Rhodes, overseer; Ira Erb, recorder; Charles Uhsfovage, financier; Gideon Stolz, receiver; L. M. Haines, I. W.; John Green, O. W., and S. P. Earhart, trustee.

Captain Scott's elegant landaulet will make its appearance on our streets to-morrow, and inasmuch as it is of purely home manufacture is deserving of more than passing notice as an evidence of the skill of Salem mechanics, it being the first vehicle of the kind manufactured on the northwest coast. In durability, convenience and elegance of finish it will compete very successfully with those of eastern manufacture, every detail having been carefully looked after by those interested with its construction, and it will bear very close inspection. David Duff superintended the wood work, James Myers did the ironing, even to the construction of the locks on the doors, and James M. Forsythe attended personally to its trimming and painting. It is a magnificent turnout, and our Salem artisans may well feel proud of it.

A BEAUTY'S WOES.

The Trials, Troubles and Tribulations "Miss Louise Montague" had with her Song and Dance Husband.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—[Special.]—The Times to-day publishes a history of the matrimonial troubles of Miss Louise Montague, the famous professional beauty, gathered from the report of George S. Josts, the examiner appointed by the court in the suit for a divorce. Miss Montague's name in private life is Laura H. Keyser, and she is the wife of Paul Keyser, who is known to the variety stage as Paul Allen, a song and dance man. Keyser was charged with desertion. He did not appear before the examiner. The beauty was married by Judge Hailes in Illinois, in 1878. She was traveling with a theatrical troupe, of which Keyser was also a member. At the close of the season the newly mated pair set up housekeeping in Eightieth street, New York. The beauty could not remember the number. They remained there eight months. A baby was born there, but before it had got into short frocks they moved into Bleecker street. They had only been there a few weeks when, the beauty declared, her husband maliciously deserted her.

WHY HER HUSBAND LEFT HER AND BABY.

"I don't know why he went away, unless I was because I had refused to give him money to gamble with." Keyser sang and danced at the rate of $2 a minute, but neither his wife nor baby saw anything of the profits. The beauty says that, though practically free, she still had to live, and she was glad to obtain an engagement at Harry Miner's theater as a singer. From there she went to serio comic singing on tours through the country. She did not see her husband again until November, 1880, when she bumped up against him at a variety house in this city where both, by a funny coincidence, had an engagement at the same time. The beauty and her wandering husband drifted, in thought, back to their first meeting and their early love. She turned the conversation to the baby, for the beauty declares that was the objective point of all her thoughts. The beauty was boarding at Mrs. Conklin's, on Ninth street, below Walnut. She asked her husband to call and see the baby. Keyser said he was yearning to see the little dear, and dropped in at his wife's boarding house that same night.

THE UNFEELING PAPA.

After he had got into an elastic condition over the baby's dimples and baby's bright eyes and baby's extraordinary likeness to himself, the devoted mother thought it a good time to suggest shoes and clothes to baby's papa. "Instead of letting your money float away," she said, "you really ought to see that baby and baby's mamma are kept in comfort," but Paul Keyser had no soul for such sentiments. He turned to his wife and said, "No, I'm d—d if I do. I have enough to do to support myself," and so they parted, friends no more. The make up was a dear failure.

The father last year in view of the fact, admitted by himself that he had contributed nothing to the support of his wife or child, and gave up, by agreement, all claim to the child. A copy of this agreement accompanies the examiners' report.

Miss Agnes Conkling corroborated the beauty's testimony as to the meeting at South Ninth street boarding house, which, she said, was kept by her mother. As Paul went out at the end of the little drama she said she shut the door with a bang. Mrs. Keyser, she said, had always been a loving and faithful mother.

William Stiles, a clerk, testified that Keyser had said to him, "I do not intend to live with my wife any more."

If no objection should be interposed in the meantime a decree of divorce will be allowed on Saturday next.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Reliable Crop Statistics.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—[Special.]—The statistician of the agricultural department, Professor J. P. Dodge, has prepared a revised compilation of crop statistics for 1882, which will be particularly interesting just now, when it is remembered how the croakers had the crops all ruined last spring, as they have them annihilated now. The total wheat crop for 1882, finally figured up at 504,778,000 bushels, against 380,280,000 for 1881, and 409,429,502 for 1879. The corn crop for 1882 is put at 1,624,917,800 bushels, for 1881 at 1,199,914,000 bushels, and for 1879 at 1,754,861,535. The average export of the wheat crop for the past six years has been about 25 per cent. It is obvious that the foreign demand for one-quarter of the crop cannot fix the price, but the home demand for the three-quarters. With reference to the crop harvested in 1882, exports to the end of February, according to the bureau of statistics, were but 8,830,047 bushels of wheat, 6,372,163 barrels of flour, and 14,685,160 bushels of corn.

The Jury Expected to Disagree.

WASHINGTON, June 3—[Special.]—Merrick is expected to finish on Monday, and has gone out of town in the meantime to recuperate, and will probably be in good condition for h… … en… the time comes. Judge Wylie … and the jury's verdict will follow. The trial ought to be over by Saturday evening of this week. Everybody expects a disagreement on the part of the jury. Merrick or Bliss promises another trial in that event, but it is not certain, if defeated this time, that they will be allowed to try again.

ADVERTISING DODGES.

We know of nothing so well calculated to put the reading public out of humor as to begin a very interesting account of some scientific discovery replete with interest, and just as the reader's mind is thoroughly imbued with the subject, and a gigantic effort being made to grasp it in all its bearings, away goes the author in praise of some patent medicine or new-fangled hair renewer; for instance, Carboline, a deodorized extract of petroleum, as now improved and perfected, which, by the way, is an article of genuine merit, and has really done wonders in the hair-producing way, as hundreds of certificates from well known citizens amply testify. It is cleanly, and so penetrating that the disease is reached and a radical change for the better takes place almost immediately. It contains nothing injurious; is, in fact, a natural hair restorer, made from petroleum, thoroughly deodorized and delightfully perfumed. It is sold by all dealers in drugs and medicines at one dollar per bottle.

BETTER THINGS

Better to smell the violet cool than sip the glowing wine
Better to hark a hidden brook than watch a diamond shine
Better the love of a gentle heart than beauty's favors proud
Better the rose's living seed than roses in a crowd
Better to love in loneliness than to bask in love all day
Better the fountain in the heart than the fountain by the way
Better be fed by mother's hand than eat alone at will
Better to trust in good than say My goods my storehouse fill
Better to be a little wise than in knowledge to abound
Better to teach a child than toil to fill perfection's round
Better to sit at a master's feet than thrill a listening state
Better to suspect that thou art proud than be sure that thou art great
Better to walk the real unseen than watch the hour's event
Better the Well done at the last than the air with shouting rent
Better to have a quiet grief than a hurrying delight
Better the twilight of the dawn than the noonday burning bright
Better a death when work is done than earth's most favored birth
Better a child in God's great house than the king of all the earth

THE GENTLEMAN BEGGAR.

AN ATTORNEY'S STORY

One morning many years ago I called by appointment on Mr John Balance the fashionable pawnbroker to accompany him to Liverpool in pursuit for a Levanting customer—for Balance in addition to pawning, does a little business in the 40 per cent. line. It rained in torrents when the cab stopped at the passage which leads past the pawning boxes to his private door. The cabman rang twice and at length Balance appeared looming through the mist and rain in the entry illuminated by his perpetual cigar. As I eyed him rather impatiently remembering that trains wait for no man something like a hairy dog or bundle of rags rose up at his feet and barred his passage for a moment. Then Balance cried out with an exclamation in answer apparently to a something I could not hear, "What man alive! slept in the passage! there, take that and get some breakfast, for heaven's sake!" So saying he jumped into the hansom and we bowled away at ten miles an hour, just catching the express as the doors of the station were closing. My curiosity was full set, for although Balance can be free with his money, it is not exactly to beggars that his generosity is usually displayed, so when comfortably ensconced in a coupe, I finished with

"You are liberal with your money this morning, pray, how often do you give silver to street cadgers? because I shall know what walk to take when fi.fa. and sharps leave off buying law."

Balance, who would have made an excellent parson if he had not been bred to a case-hardening trade, and has still a soft bit left in his heart that is always fighting with his hard heart, did not smile at all but looked as if squeezing a lemon into his Saturday night's punch. He answered slowly "A cadger—yes, a beggar—a miserable wretch he is now, but let me tell you, Master David, that that miserable bundle of rags was born and bred a gentleman; the son of a nobleman, the husband of an heiress, and has sat and dined at tables where you and I Master David, are only allowed to view the plate by favor of the butler. I have lent him thousands and been well paid. The last thing I had from him was his court suit, and I hold now his bill for £100, that will be paid, I expect, when he dies."

"Why, what nonsense you are talking! You must be dreaming this morning. However we are alone, I'll light a weed in defiance of railway law, you shall spin that yarn, for true or untrue, it will fill up the time to Liverpool."

"As for yarn," replied Balance, "the whole story is short enough, and as for truth, that you may easily find out if you like to take the trouble. I thought the poor wretch was dead, and I own it put me out, meeting him this morning, for I had a curious dream last night."

"Oh, hang your dreams. Tell us about this gentleman beggar that bleeds you of half crowns—that melts the heart even of a pawnbroker."

"Well, then, that beggar is the illegitimate son of the late marquis of Hoopborough by a Spanish lady of rank. He received a first rate education and was brought up in his father's house. At a very early age he obtained an appointment in a public office, and was presented by the marquis at court and received into the first society, where his handsome person and agreeable manners made him a great favorite. Soon after coming of age he married the daughter of Sir E Bumber who brought him a very handsome fortune, which was strictly settled on herself. They lived in splendid style, kept several carriages a house in town and a place in the country. For some reason or other illness, or to please his lady's pride he resigned his appointment. His father died and left him nothing, indeed, he seemed at that time very handsomely provided for.

Very soon Mr and Mrs. Molinos Fitz Roy began to disagree. She was cold correct—he was hot and random. He was quite dependent on her, and she made him feel it. When he began to get into debt he came to me. At length some shocking quarrel occurred, some case of jealousy on the wife's side, not without reason, I believe and the end of it was Mr Fitz Roy was turned out of doors. The house was his wife's, the furniture was his wife's and the fortune was his wife's—he was, in fact, her pensioner. He left with a few hundred pounds ready money and some personal jewelry and went to a hotel. On these and credit he lived. Being illegitimate he had no relations, being a fool, when he spent his money he lost his friends. The world took his wife's part, when they found she had the fortune, and the only parties who interfered were her relatives, who did their best to make the quarrel incurable. To crown all, one night he was run over by a cab, was carried to a hospital and lay there for months, and was, during several weeks of the time unconscious. A message to the wife, by the hands of one of his debauched companions, seen by a humane surgeon obtained an intimation that if he died, Mr. Croak, the undertaker to the family had orders to see to the funeral,' and that Mrs Molinos was on the point of starting for the continent, not to return for some years. When Fitz Roy was discharged he came to me limping on two sticks, to pawn his court suit and told me his story. I was really sorry for the fellow, such a handsome, thoroughbred looking man. He was going then into the west somewhere, to try to hunt out a friend. 'What to do, Balance,' he said, 'I don't know. I can't dig, and unless somebody will make me their gamekeeper I must starve, or beg, as my Jezebel bade me when we parted.'

"I lost sight of Molinos for a long time and when I next came upon him it was in the Rookery of Westminster in a low lodging house where I was searching with an officer for stolen goods. He was pointed out to me as the 'gentleman cadger' because he was so free with his money when in luck. He recognized me but turned away then. I have since seen him and relieved him more than once, although he never asks for anything. How he lives heaven knows. Without money without friends, without useful education of any kind he tramps the country as you saw him perhaps doing a little hop picking, or hay making only happy when he obtains the means to get drunk. I have heard through the kitchen whispers that you know come to me that he is entitled to some property, and I expect if he were to die his wife would pay the £100 bill I hold; at any rate what I have told you I know to be true and the bundle of rags I relieved just now is known in every thieves lodging as the gentleman cadger."

The story produced an impression on me. I am fond of speculation and like the excitement of a legal hunt as much as some do a fox chase. A gentleman a beggar a wife rolling in wealth rumors of unknown property due to the husband it seems as if there was picking for me amidst this carrion of pauperism. Before returning from Liverpool I had purchased the gentleman beggar's acceptance from Balance. I then inserted in the Times the following advertisement: "Horace Molinos Fitz Roy. If this gentleman will apply to David Discount Esq., solicitor St James, he will hear of something to his advantage. Any person furnishing Mr F's address shall receive £1 1s reward. He was last seen etc." Within twenty four hours I had ample proof of the wide circulation of the Times. My office was besieged by beggars of every degree men and women lame and blind Irish Scotch and English some on crutches some in bowls some in go carts. They all knew him as the 'gentleman,'" and I must do the regular fraternity of tramps the justice to say that not one would answer a question until he made certain that I meant the 'gentleman' no harm.

One evening about three weeks after the appearance of the advertisement my clerk announced another beggar. There was in an old man leaning on a staff clad in a [illegible] gray coat all patched and torn with a tattered hat from under which masses of tangled hair fell over his shoulders and half concealed his face. The beggar [illegible] asked who [illegible] for. "You have advertised for Mr Molinos Fitz Roy. I [illegible] him [illegible] hard [illegible] sunk I think [illegible] would start with such misery as his." [illegible] in a sort of piteous whimper.

I answered quickly [illegible] I am [illegible] good as [illegible] myself."

"Then you [illegible] Molinos Fitz Roy."

While we were conversing and [illegible] brought in [illegible] my head would not [illegible] on I started and shuddered when I saw [illegible] knew that the wretched creature before me was under 35 years of age [illegible] and [illegible] dry fair hair [illegible] teeth of the half open mouth [illegible] made me [illegible] of the [illegible]. As he [illegible] a staff half [illegible] his [illegible] yellow [illegible] fingers clasped over the crutch head of his stick. It was indeed a picture of misery [illegible] squalor [illegible] too horrible to dwell upon. I made him sit down and then sent for some refreshment which he devoured like a ghoul and set to work to unravel his story. It was difficult to keep to the point but with pains I learned what convinced me that he was entitled to some property whether great or small there is no evidence. On parting I said "Now Mr F[illegible] you must stay in town while I make proper inquiries. What allowance will be enough to keep you comfortably?"

He answered humbly after much pressing "Would you think ten shillings too much?"

I don't like if I do these things at all to do them shabbily so I said "Come every Saturday and I will have a pound." He was profuse in his thanks as all such men are as long as distress lasts.

I had previously learned that my ragged client's wife was in England living in a splendid house in Hyde Park gardens under her maiden name. On the following day the earl of Owen called upon me wanting £5000 by 5 o'clock the same evening. It was a case of life or death with him, so I made my terms and took advantage of his pressure to execute a coup de main. I proposed that he should drive me home to receive the money, calling at Mrs Molinos, in Hyde Park gardens on our way. I knew that the coronet and liveries of his father the marquis would insure me an audience with Mrs Molinos Fitz Roy.

My scheme answered. I was introduced into the lady's presence. She was and probably is, a very stately, handsome woman, with pale complexion, high, solid forehead, regular features, thin, pinched, self-satisfied mouth. My interview was very short. I plunged into the middle of the affair, but had scarcely mentioned the word husband, when she interrupted me with "I presume you have lent this profligate person money, and you want me to pay you." She paused and then said "He shall not have a farthing." As she spoke her white face became scarlet.

"But madam the man is starving. I have strong reasons for believing he is entitled to property and if you refuse any assistance I must take other measures." She rang the bell, wrote something rapidly on a card and as the footman appeared pushed it toward me across the table with the air of touching a toad, saying, "There, sir, is the address of my solicitors, apply to them if you think you have any claim. Robert show the person out, and take care he is not admitted again."

So far I had effected nothing and, to tell the truth, felt rather crestfallen under the influence of that grand manner peculiar to certain great ladies and to all great actresses.

My next visit was to the attorneys Messrs Leasum & Fashun of Lincoln's Inn square and there I was at home. I had had dealings with the firm before. They were agents for half the aristocracy, who always run in crowds like sheep after the same wine merchants the same architects, the same horse dealers, and the same law agents. It may be doubted whether the quality of law and land management they got on this principle is equal to their wine and horses. At any rate my friends of Lincoln's Inn, like others of the same class are distinguished by their courteous manners, deliberate proceedings innocence of legal technicalities, long credit and heavy charges. Leasum, the elder partner, wears powder and a huge bunch of seals, lives in Queen square, drives a brougham, gives the dinners and does the cordial department. He is so strict in performing this latter duty that he once addressed a poacher who had shot a duke's keeper as "my dear creature," although he afterward hung him.

Fashun has chambers in St James street drives a cab, wears a tip, and does the grand Pasha style.

My business lay with Leasum. The interviews and letters passing were numerous. However, it came at last to the following dialogue.

"Well, my dear Mr. Discount," began Mr Leasum, who hates me like poison, "I'm really very sorry that poor, dear Molinos—knew his father well, a great man a perfect gentleman, but you know what women are eh, Mr Discount? My client won't advance a shilling, she knows it would only be wasted in low dissipation. Now, don't you think (this was said very insinuatingly)—don't you think he had better be sent to the workhouse, very comfortable accommodations there, I can assure you—meat twice a week, and excellent soup, and then Mr Discount, we might consider about allowing you something for that bill."

"Mr Leasum can you reconcile it to your conscience to make such an arrangement? Here's a wife rolling in luxury and a husband starving!"

"No, Mr Discount, not starving; there is the workhouse, as I observed before, besides allow me to suggest that these appeals to feeling are quite unprofessional—quite unprofessional."

"But, Mr. Leasum, touching this property, which the poor man is entitled to?"

"Why, there, again, Mr. D[illegible] you must excuse me, you really must. I don't say he is, I don't say he is not. If you know he is entitled to property, I am sure you know how to proceed. The law is open to you Mr Discount—the law is open—and a man of your talent will know how to use it."

"Then, Mr Leasum, you mean that I must in order to right this starving man file a bill of discovery to extract from you the particulars of his rights. You have the marriage settlement and all the information and you decline to allow a pension or afford any information, the man is to starve or go to the workhouse."

"Why Mr D you are so quick and violent. It really is not professional, but you see (here a subdued smile of triumph) it has been decided that a solicitor is not found to afford such information as you ask to the injury of his client."

"Then you mean that the poor Molinos may rot and starve, while you keep secret from him at his wife's request, his title to an income, and that the court of chancery will back you in this iniquity."

I kept repeating the word "starve" because I saw it made my respectable opponent wince.

"Well then just listen to me. I know that in the happy state of your equity law chancery can't help my client, but I have another plan. I will go hence to my office issue a writ take your client's husband in execution, as soon as he is lodged in jail I shall file his schedule in the insolvent court and when he comes up for his discharge I shall put you in the witness box and examine you on oath touching property of which you know the insolvent to be possessed, and where will be your privileged communication then?"

The respectable Leasum's face lengthened in a twinkling his comfortable confident air vanished he ceased twiddling his gold chain and at length he muttered

"Suppose we pay the debt?"

"Why then I'll arrest him for a—after for another."

"But my dear Mr Discount such conduct would not be quite respectable."

"That's my business. My client has been wronged I am determined to right him and when the aristocratic firm of Leasum & Fashun takes refuge according to the custom of respectable repudiators in the cool shades of the court of chancery with a mere bill discounting attorney like David Discount need not hesitate about cutting a bludgeon out of the insolvent court."

"Well well Mr D you are so warm so fiery. We must deliberate we must consult. You will give me until the day after tomorrow and then we will write you our final determination. In the mean time send us an authority to act for Mr Molinos Fitz Roy."

Of course I lost no time in getting the gentleman beggar to sign a proper letter.

On the appointed day came a communication with Leasum and Fashun's seal which I opened not without professional eagerness. It was as follows:

In re Molinos Fitz Roy and Another

"Sir—In answer to your application on behalf of Mr Molinos Fitz Roy we beg to inform you that under the administration of paternal aunt who died intestate your client is entitled to £2,000 8s 1d 3 per cent, £1510 10s 4d 3 per cents reduced, £1000 1s annuities, £600 land stock, £1500 India stock besides [illegible] making up £10,000 which we are prepared to transfer to Mr Molinos Fitz Roy forthwith."

It was a windfall! It quite took away my breath.

At [illegible] came my gentleman beggar and what puzzled me was how to break the news. I [illegible] him [illegible] very much [illegible] that [illegible] I had not much time for [illegible]. He came in rather better dressed than when I first saw him with only a week's [illegible] on his chin [illegible] six weeks had elapsed since our first interview. He was still [illegible] humble [illegible] Saturday [illegible] him.

After a prelude I said "Mind Mr F[illegible] [illegible] something [illegible] what [illegible] might give me [illegible]." Starting [illegible] he [illegible] rapidly "Oh take half if there is £10 take half of it—if there is £100 take half."

"No, Mr F, I don't do business in that way. I shall be satisfied with 10 per cent."

It was [illegible] I [illegible] him out into the street impelled to tell him the news yet dreading the effect not daring to make the revelation in the face of [illegible].

I began hesitatingly "Mr Fitz Roy I am happy to say that I find you are entitled to * * * £10 000!"

"Ten thousand pounds," he echoed. "£10 000!" he shrieked, "£10 000!" he [illegible] my arm violently. "You are a brick. Here cab! cab!" his voice drew up the cab; the shout might have been heard a mile off. He jumped in the fly.

"Where to?" said the driver.

"To a tailor's you rascal!"

"Ten thousand pounds! ha ha ha!" he repeated hysterically when in the cab and every moment grasping my arm. Presently he subsided looked me straight in the face and muttered with agonizing fervor

"What a jolly brick you are."

The tailor the hosier the bootmaker, the hair dresser were in turn visited by this poor pagan of externals. As by degrees under their hands he emerged from the beggar to the gentleman his spirits rose his eyes brightened, he walked erect but always nervously grasping my arm fearing apparently to lose sight of me for a moment lest his fortune should vanish with me. The impatient pride with which he gave his orders to the astonished tradesman for the finest and best of everything and the amazed air of the fashionable hair dresser when he presented his matted locks and stubble chin to be cut and shaved may be acted—it cannot be described.

By the time the external transformation was complete and I sat down in a cafe in the Haymarket opposite a haggard but handsome thoroughbred looking man, whose air with the exception of the wild eyes and deeply browned face did not differ from the stereotyped men about town sitting around us. Mr Molinos Fitz Roy had already almost forgotten the past. He bullied the waiter and criticised the wine as if he had done nothing else but dine and drink and scold there all the days of his life.

Once he wished to drink my health and would have proclaimed his whole story to the coffee room assembly in a raving style. When I left he almost wept in terror at the idea of losing sight of me. But allowing for these ebullitions—the natural result of such a whirl of events—he was wonderfully calm and self possessed.

The next day his first care was to distribute £50 among his friends the cadgers, at a house of call in Westminster, and formally to dissolve his connection with them, those present undertaking for the "fraternity" that for the future he should never be noticed by them in public or private. I cannot follow his career much farther. Adversity had taught him nothing. He was soon again surrounded by well bred vampires, who had forgotten him when penniless, but they amused him, and that was enough. The £10 000 were rapidly melting when he invited me to a grand dinner at Richmond which included a dozen of the most agreeable, good looking, well dressed dandies of London interspersed with a display of pretty butterfly bonnets. We dined deliciously, and drank as men do of iced wines in the dog days—looking down from Richmond hill.

One of the pink bonnets crowned Fitz Roy with a wreath of flowers, he looked—less the intellect—as handsome as Alcibiades. Intensely excited and flushed he rose with a champagne glass in his hand to propose my health.

The oratorical powers of his father had not descended to him. Jerking out sentences by spasms at length he said, "I was a beggar—I am a gentleman—thanks to this——"

Here he leaned heavily on my shoulder a moment and then fell back. We raised him loosened his neckcloth—

"Fainted!" said the ladies

"Drunk!" said the gentlemen

He was dead

Niagara Revisited.

All readers of "Their Wedding Journey" will keenly relish the sequel to that episode entitled "Niagara Revisited," twelve years later, in the May Atlantic. Mr Howel's opening paragraph showing how Basil and Isabel had got on in these twelve years, may be quoted

"Life had not used them ill in this time, and the fairish treatment they had received was not wholly unmerited. The twelve years past had made them older, as the years must in passing. Basil was now 42 and his moustache was well sprinkled with gray. Isabel was 39, and the parting of her hair had thinned and retreated, but she managed to give it the effect of youthful abundance by combing it low down upon her forehead, and roughing it there with a wet brush. By gaslight she was still very pretty, she believed that she looked more interesting, and she thought Basil's gray moustache distinguished. He had grown stouter, he filled his double-breasted frock coat compactly, and from time to time he had the buttons set forward, his hands were rounded on the backs, and he no longer wears his old number of gloves by two sizes, no amount of powder or manipulation from the young lady in the shop would induce them to go on. But this did not matter much now, for he seldom wore gloves at all. He was glad that the fashion suffered him to spare in that direction, for he was obliged to look somewhat carefully after the outgoes. The insurance business was not what it had been, and though Basil had comfortably established himself in it, he had not made money. He sometimes thought that he might have done quite as well if he had gone into literature but it was now too late. They had not a very large family, they had only a boy of eleven, who 'took after' his father, and a girl of nine, who took after the boy, but with the American feeling that their children must have the best of everything, they made it an expensive family, and they spent nearly all Basil earned."

Let Them Go.

He had lived six months in Europe and met in the street car. She, too, had been abroad. The car was crowded, and he held on a strap while he leaned forward gracefully and talked to her. They did not mind that all in the car heard them. They rather enjoyed that. She said she was so anxious to cross again. He said so was he. She said it was just horrid here, and he agreed.

"There is nothing at all for a fellow to do," and he went on, "nothing for him to see, nothing for him to buy. I put fifty dollars in my pocket a week ago and I have it there yet. I actually couldn't spend it."

It was not polite but the car roared. I think even the horses smiled for the front door was open—it was a spring like day—and the words of the idiot must have reached them. There was a look of unutterable contempt upon the faces of the man and woman, but they spoke no more. Likely they detest their country and their country people more than ever. The mission of Henry James, Jr., is not yet fulfilled.

In New York 10,000 children attended the twenty third yearly meeting of Baptist Sunday schools recently.

Markets by Telegraph.

NEW YORK MARKET REVIEW

"NEW YORK June 2—[Special.]—June opens upon a comparatively dull and unsatisfactory market, and quiet times are to be looked for in business circles during the next sixty days, after which some definite idea can be formed with regard to the harvests upon the results of which fall trade will largely depend. At present the outlook in this country is very good, with but partial exceptions. In Europe moderate crops are looked for yet the food supply still in hand is considerable, and should the wheat crop be relatively light, there will be an abundance of food at reasonable prices

Leading manufacturers and industries throughout the country can hardly be said to be in a flourishing condition

California goods are extremely dull, and there is nothing doing in any description except in wool, sales of which are only 50 bales burry spring at 15c, 130,000 pounds Oregon private. Whale oil in active demand at New Bedford for northern, with sales of 26 500 barrels for manufacturers account private. Balance of stock is in few hands, and firmly held. Sperm quiet with sales of 70 barrels for manufacture

NEW YORK FREIGHTS

NEW YORK June 2—[Special.]—All inquiet at the wharves of the California vessels except with the Wm H Campbell and Alfred A. Snow, which are finishing up, both having cleared. The latter's cargo includes 976 tons coal, 250 cans oil 50 bbls sugar 50 casks chicory 174 bbls rosin, 200 bbls whisky 250 cases canned goods, 50 kegs nails, 100 kegs horse shoes, 200 tons pig iron and 200 tons rails. Rates are easier with tonnage in good supply

Isthmus freights are fairly active. The steamer leaves to-day has 400 kegs nails, 350 bxs tin, 25 casks chicory and 20 bbls oils. Freights to Portland are full. The Sovereign of the Seas is closing out. Her cargo includes 1010 pkgs starch, 500 bxs candles, 5 0[illegible] malt, 200 cs and 25 bbls oil 87 bbls whisky, 100 kegs nails and 214 tons coal

At Philadelphia there is not much doing, yet there are two ships in berth

At Boston the market is flat no ship loading

Railroad freights at Boston are fairly active. Shipments include 360 cases canned goods, 100 boxes herrings and 300 pkgs fish

NEW YORK GRAIN MARKET

NEW YORK June 2—[Special.]—Telegram. For the first time in fifteen years grain arriving in this city is being stored here instead of being shipped to Great Britain or the continent by vessels previously chartered. Mr Vining of the national board of marine underwriters stated that there was not at the present time a single sailing vessel in this port loading grain for either England or the continent, and very few chartered steamers, in fact the grain carrying trade is so extraordinarily dull that vessels are doing almost nothing. Last month but fifteen vessels left this port with grain of which thirteen went to Portugal with grain in bags the demand in that country being for very low grades up to within a couple of years. At least thirteen grain laden vessels have departed for Europe each year during the month of May for years past. The cause of this falling off is attributed in shipping circles to the speculation in options on change. The method of speculation has changed so of late that any one who has $40 000 to put up as a margin can get a broker to carry a boat load of grain of about 80 000 bushels until he is either wiped out or wishes to realize. By the option method of speculation which has been introduced, the dealing in grain is rapidly degenerating to the bucket shop level. Sales of wheat greatly exceed of course the actual amount on hand, and the market generally is oversold. E. H Walker, statistician for the produce exchange furnishes statistics of grain sales in cash and options during the past five months which places sales of wheat at 527 997 500 bushels against 4 06[illegible] 000 bushels last year. The wheat export for the same period was 6 507 837 bushels, against 7 428 [illegible] bushels for same time last year

CONTRACT FOR NEW COLLIER

PHILADELPHIA June 2—[Special.]—The Central Pacific railroad to-day contracted with Messrs Cramp & Sons for the construction of a new iron steamship for use of the Pacific coast between Tacoma and San Francisco. She will be 332 feet long 42 feet beam and 24½ feet depth of hold with 4000 tons carrying capacity. She will be supplied with engines of the compound type. The vessel is intended to take the place of the steamship Tacoma which was lost some time ago on the Pacific coast

SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Mark Twain's Theory of the Origin of Southern Chivalry.

"Southern chivalry" don't find much favor at the door of Mark Twain in his new book. He speaks of the awakening of the world to freedom by the French revolution, and goes on: "Then comes Sir Walter Scott with his enchantments and by his single might checks this wave of progress and even turns it back; sets the world in love with dreams and phantoms, with decayed and swinish forms of religion; with decayed and degraded systems of government, with the silliness and emptiness, sham grandeurs, sham gauds and sham chivalries of a brainless and worthless long vanished society. He did measureless harm more real and lasting harm, perhaps, than any other individual that ever wrote. Most of the world has now outlived those harms, though by no means all of them, but in our south they flourish pretty forcefully still. * * * But for the Sir Walter disease the character of the southerner—or southron, according to Sir Walter's starchier way of phrasing it—would be wholly modern, in place of modern and mediæval mixed, and the south would be fully a generation further advanced than it is. It was Sir Walter who made every gentleman in the south a major, or a colonel, or a judge before the war, and it was he, also, who made these gentlemen value these bogus decorations. For it was he that created rank and caste down there, and also reverence for rank and caste and pride and pleasure in them. Enough is laid on slavery without fathering upon it these creations and contributions of Sir Walter. * * * A curious exemplification of the power of a single book for good or harm is shown in the effects wrought by Don Quixote and those wrought by Ivanhoe. The first swept the world's admiration for the mediæval chivalry silliness out of existence, and the other restored it. As far as our south is concerned, the good work done by Cervantes is pretty nearly a dead letter so effectually has Scott's pernicious work undermined it.

An interview is a modern invention good naturedly adopted by newspapers to enable public men to put their ideas before the people without assuming the responsibility for them, and in a form to be repudiated as the inaccurate work of the reporter in case the views do not "take."

therefore the plaintiff is not authorized to maintain this action, citing Or. Ry & Nav. Co. vs. the R. F. ... in MS. October term, 1882, of the Oregon supreme court, in which it is held that a corporation cannot maintain an action to ... a right of way over the lands ... without alleging and proving that the ... were unable to agree as to the compensation to be paid therefor.

Notwithstanding the awkward and confused language of the provisions in the acts of ... and 1880, supra, they may be fairly interpreted as at least authorizing the United States, by the department of justice, ... to maintain a legal proceeding to ascertain the value of any land which in the judgment of the secretary of war are necessary and proper to secure the right of way for the line of the canal and locks and ... the adjacent land as may be necessary and proper for the ... convenient construction, operation and ... of the same. And this proceeding must be according to the mode provided by the laws of this state for the appropriation of land to public uses.

This mode is provided for in title 3 of the corporation act, Or Laws ..., by which a corporation desiring to appropriate lands or the right of way ... may maintain an action therefor, in which the right to make such appropriation and the value thereof are to be ... and determined as in an ordinary action at law.

The government of the United States has the right of eminent domain, and may exercise it within a state whenever necessary to the exercise of any of the powers conferred upon it by the constitution, and no question is made but that the construction of this canal and locks is an exercise of such power. In the exercise of this right it is not restrained by any constitutional limitation, except that it is bound to make or provide a just compensation to the owner for the property taken. Kohl v. U. S., 91 U. S. 367; Cooley Con. Lim. ...; Fifth Amendment to the Con.

The right to appropriate private property to public uses rests with the legislative power. A legislative act may declare the necessity of the appropriation. And such acts being the law of the land, no other or further adjudication is necessary on this point. Cooley Con. Lim. 527.

In this case congress has not absolutely or directly selected any land at the Cascades for the use of the canal, nor declared that there is a necessity for so doing, but it has committed the matter to the judgment of the secretary of war, who it is alleged has in pursuance of said authority duly made the selection in question.

But this in contemplation of the legislation by congress is not an appropriation of the premises to the public use. Before taking possession the secretary must purchase the property, either with the consent of the owner or at a "price" to be ascertained in a judicial proceeding instituted for the purpose of condemning the same to such use, which "price," in the latter case, must be secured or paid to the owner before the land can be declared or considered subject to the public use.

It may be that the plaintiff will decline the purchase at the value fixed upon the property in this proceeding, or that the sum appropriated therefor is insufficient for that purpose, and in such case the proceeding to appropriate may be considered abandoned or delayed until congress furnishes the necessary means wherewith to complete the purchase, or the court upon the application of the defendant may order it dismissed for want of prosecution. B. & S. Ry Co v. Nesbit, 10 How. 399.

But it is not necessary in this proceeding, as claimed by counsel for the defendant, that the plaintiff should allege or prove, in the first instance, any fact to show the necessity of appropriating the property, except that in the judgment of the secretary it is necessary and was selected by him for that purpose. And if the defendant is allowed under any circumstances to contest the necessity of the proposed appropriation, either in whole or in part, he must do so by proper pleading and proof, as a matter of defense. Cooley Con. Lim., 538, et seq.

Neither is it necessary to allege or prove that the plaintiff was unable to agree with the defendant as to the value of the premises. By the corporation act of Oregon, supra, this inability is made a condition precedent to the right to bring this action under the authority of courts of the state, and therefore the fact must be alleged and proved by the plaintiff. But congress in authorizing this proceeding did not at least in form make this inability a condition precedent to its maintenance by the plaintiff. But in effect, the same condition is imposed upon the plaintiff by the act of 1876, which in substance provides that this proceeding to compel a sale shall not be resorted to until the owner has refused to sell for a reasonable price, and this fact is alleged in the complaint. But it is objected that the allegation is a general one, without stating when the offer to purchase was made and refused, or what was the price offered. However this at most is only a defective statement of a material fact, for which the only remedy provided by the code of C. P. (§ 84) is a motion to make more definite and certain. As the allegation stands, proof may be made under it of all the particulars implied in it. It is sufficient to support a verdict. Neis v. Yocum, U. S. C. C. Dis. Or., May 15, 1883. Nor is it necessary that the complaint should contain a distinct allegation as to the value of the premises. Whether they are of much or little or no value is not material to the plaintiff's right to the relief sought. But it may be that the defendant can tender the plaintiff an issue upon this point in its answer, which the latter must meet in his replication, or the fact as pleaded will for the purposes of the action be admitted.

It only remains to consider the right of the United States to maintain this action under the circumstances and the jurisdiction of this court over the subject matter.

In Kohl v. U. S., the supreme court held that when congress directed the secretary of the treasury to purchase a site for a public building in Cincinnati and afterwards appropriated money "for the purchase, at private sale or by condemnation of such site," that the secretary was authorized under "the national right of eminent domain," to select such site, and that the circuit court within whose jurisdiction the selection was made, had, under the act of 1789, jurisdiction of a proceeding brought by the United States to procure the condemnation of the site for the purpose specified. The provision of the act of 1789 referred to, is now found in § 629 of the Revised Statutes, which reads: "The circuit courts shall have jurisdiction, as follows:

* * * * * * * *

Third—Of all suits at common law where the United States or any officer thereof, suing under the authority of any act of congress, are plaintiffs."

This is decisive of the right of the United States to maintain this action in this court, and the complaint is sufficient unless it is incumbent on the plaintiff to allege and prove that congress has absolutely provided for making the owner of the property compensation therefor.

The provision in the acts of 1876 and 1880 appropriating money for the purchase of the land is not absolute. The amount appropriated may have been expended in the purchase of the right of way already acquired, or in the construction of the work, or owing to the time that has elapsed they may have been returned into the treasury as surplus fund under the provisions of § 3691 of the revised statutes.

The obligation to make compensation for property taken for the public use under the right of eminent domain, is generally regarded as a necessary condition of the exercise of the right even at common law. Cooley Con. Lim. 559. And it is made imperatively so by the Fifth amendment to the constitution, which among other things declares—"Nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation." This constitutional protection of the rights of the individual against the public is to be enforced by the court when ever any department of the government undertakes to disregard it as the occasion may require. U. S. v. Lee, 106 U. S. 220.

Chancellor Kent (2 Kent 339) says: "A provision for compensation is a necessary attendant on the due and constitutional exercise of power of the lawgiver to deprive an individual of his property without his consent."

When property is taken directly by the state and on its credit, it is generally considered that it is not essential to the validity of the act authorizing it to be done that it should provide for the payment of the compensation before the property is actually taken. It has been held to be sufficient if adequate provision for compensation is contained in the act, and this provision must be such as will enable the owner to compel the payment of the compensation without unnecessary delay or inconvenience. Bloodgood v. M. H. Ry Co., 18 Wend. 9.

So far as appears there is now no provision made by the plaintiff for compensating the defendant for this property. The appropriations which once might have been used for that purpose have probably been otherwise expended or lapsed into the treasury—at least there is nothing appears to the contrary.

The case then stands thus: Congress has in effect directed the secretary of war to select the necessary and proper lands at the place in question for the construction and operation of the canal and locks, and authorized him to take possession of them as soon as the value is ascertained in a legal proceeding, which the department of justice is authorized to institute for that purpose, and the same is secured or paid to the owner. The secretary has made the selection, and the owner having ... to accept a reasonable price therefor ... proceeding to ascertain the value is ... in this court. But congress has ... no provision for the payment of the value when ... ascertained.

Upon the statement of facts my first impression was that this action could not be maintained. But upon further reflection I am satisfied that it can. This proceeding is for the taking of private property for the public use ... that it is necessary ... taking. On the contrary it is only preliminary thereto and for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the property proposed to be taken. The final appropriation of the land will not take place, if ever, until the ... is given ... to that effect, which cannot ... and will not ... until ... the owner ...

As has been ... congress has not ... for the payment of the value as ascertained in this proceeding, ... it may be ... the ... to ... that ... the attempt to appropriate the property fails ... practically abandoned. The only ... to the ... resulting from ... is that the defendant may be put to the trouble and expense of establishing the value of its property for naught. ... and ... provided that the plaintiff in such cases shall pay the costs of the proceeding whenever there is a judgment of dismissal. But as the United States never pays costs, this is an ... not peculiar to this proceeding, and which cannot affect the plaintiff's right to maintain it.

The plaintiff is in my judgment entitled to maintain this proceeding so far as to ascertain the value of the lands selected by the secretary of war for the public use, without showing that it has made any provision for the payment of such value, but before it can have judgment condemning the lands to such use it must pay the same to the owner.

The demurrer is therefore overruled.

James F. Watson for the United States.
Joseph N. Dolph for the defendant.

A Priest on the Irish

A sensible priest who has his worldly and remarked to Gath during the week: "You can now see why our church denounces and forbids secret societies. It was to save strong wild races like the Irish and the Italian peasantry from indulging in the law of their origin and doing secret crimes under the incentive of a dark autocracy, such as they so readily fall under the sway of in ... ities. You see Tammany Hall, and what blind obedience it can get out of Irishmen. Now make a secret lodge inside of that, oath-bound and exempt from the church's confessional and teach it to kill, to use poison and to send nitro-glycerine, and what a Tophet could be made of this smiling world. The fear of hell, whose fires we threaten them with alone will hold some of these bloody savages. Yet the tale of English tyranny entraps even some of our priests, as it has done Protestant priests, into Peep-o'-Day, or Molly Maguire or other kindred orders. We see that the Irish race would become wild, as it once was if we let it drift into a Carbonari." "Then you think the treasonous instinct is in the race?" "I do. The Celt is a strong politician, but he is dissatisfied with plain tranquil government and wants a bold and violent counsel. See how these American Irish are treating Parnell. He would give his country a European bearing and train it to self government. These safe exiled satraps demand blood, combustion and terrorism, and Parnell is made their martyr. Independence is worth nothing to Ireland if her people must be demonized first."

President Buchanan's Romance

A more or less responsible correspondent writing from Paris says: "I heard lately a curious and perfectly authentic anecdote respecting President Buchanan. It is not generally known, I believe, that the White House came near having at one time an English and a titled mistress in the person of that gentleman's wife. While Mr. Buchanan was minister to the Court of St. James he made the acquaintance of a widowed lady of very high rank. A sincere and fervent attachment sprang up between the pair, and only the opposition of the lady's aristocratic relatives prevented their union. So their mutual attachment resulted in nothing more than a profound and life-long friendship. A constant correspondence was maintained between them till the day of Mr. Buchanan's death. The lady long survived her American friend, her death having taken place only a few years ago. She was always noted for her kindly feeling toward Americans and her predilection for American society. In a room apart she kept a number of souvenirs of her friend, including a fine portrait and also some of his gifts to her, which were mainly of a literary and national character, such as works by American authors, the photographs and autographs of American celebrities, etc."

SHAKESPEARE AND THE BIBLE

From the Athenæum

In attempting to ascertain this it is necessary to bear in mind the period over which his writings extended and the different English versions of the bible which were then extant. Shakespeare was born in 1564 and died in 1616, and though only about fourteen or sixteen of his plays were published during his lifetime, it is generally admitted that thirty-four out of the thirty-six plays were written between 1591 and 1611, and that only two plays were written after the appearance of the present authorized version viz 1611. Apart, therefore, from the question whether Shakespeare sympathized with the great outcry against the present authorized version which was raised when it first appeared, he could not possibly have used it for his literary work, even if he had wished to do so. Our investigation is thus restricted to the English translations prior to the authorized version. Of those there are no less than eight, one of the new testament and seven of the entire bible, seven Protestant and one Roman Catholic. They are as follows: (1) Tyndale's translation of the new ... which appeared in 1525; (2) Coverdale's translation of the entire bible, which was published in 1535; (3) Matthew's bible, which appeared in 1537; (4) Lord Cromwell's, or the Great bible, which appeared in 1539; (5) Archbishop Cranmer's bible, of which there were published no less than six different issues in 1540-41; (6) the Geneva version, also called the Breeches Bible, which was published by our English refugees at Geneva, who fled thither to escape the Marian persecution, and which became the version of the Puritans; (7) the Bishops' bible, which appeared in 1568, and was designed to counteract the Calvinistic and Puritanic tinge of the Geneva version; and (8) the Roman Catholic version, called the Rhemish and Douay bible, because the new testament appeared at Rheims in 1582 and the old testament was published twenty-seven years later at Douay (1609). It is also called Douay alone because the same Roman Catholic divine of the college at Douay made this version. What makes it so difficult to ascertain the precise version which Shakespeare used is the fact that in nearly all his allusions to biblical events he gives his own striking paraphrases in his own matchless language, as is to be seen from the above quoted narrative about Jacob and Laban and the proverbial saying about the camel and the eye of the needle. Even in the dialogue between the two clowns about Adam bearing arms, where Shakespeare puts into the mouth of the First Clown as a direct quotation from the bible. The scripture says Adam digged, he quotes a passage which does not occur in the bible. The allusion manifestly is to Genesis ii. 15, where we are told Adam was put into the garden to dress it or to work it, as all the versions then extant render it. It will thus be seen that even in this instance, where the pun rests upon a play on the words, Shakespeare gives his own paraphrase.

THE HUMISTON FOOD PRESERVATIVE.

Perfect in Work,

Safe and Harmless,

Economical,

DOES ALL THAT IS CLAIMED.

REX MAGNUS ...

The Discoverer ... A Ben fac or ...

R. F. Humiston ... benefactor of his race.

35 DAYS' TEST.

REX MAGNUS has kept twenty-three kinds of Meats and other Food thirty-five days in a warm room (average 70°), and here is the testimony of the eminent scientific gentleman who had exclusive control of the experiment in his private laboratory, viz: PROF. SAMUEL W. JOHNSON, OF YALE COLLEGE.

The Professor's report, dated March ..., 1883, says:

"My test of ... days on meats, etc., bought in open market have certainly been severe in daily mean temperature of 70°, and I am satisfied that the different brands of Rex Magnus, The Humiston Food Preservative, with which I have experimented, have accomplished all claimed for them. So far as I have yet learned they are the only preparations that are effective and at the same time practicable, for domestic use. At the banquet on treated meats at the New Haven House I could not distinguish between those which had been sixteen days in my laboratory and those newly taken from the refrigerator of the hotel. The oysters were perfectly palatable and fresh to my taste and better as it happened than those served at the same time which were recently taken from the shell. The roast beef, steak, chicken, turkey and quail were all as good as I have ever eaten."

Rex Magnus is safe, tasteless, pure, and Prof. Johnson adds in his report: "I should anticipate no ill results from its use, and consider it less harmful than common salt."

The results of equally conclusive experiments in all parts of the country have brought the same good results.

Time is Conquered.

It is an unquestioned fact that all first-class food is improved by keeping, and as Rex Magnus will do this, it at once becomes an important factor in every family, restaurant, hotel and market.

Cream Kept Fifty-Nine Days.

No fear of muggy days or bad weather after this. It is equally good in any climate. Cream has been put up in Boston and taken to Italy forty-two days after, and to Switzerland fifty-nine days after, in perfect condition. It works equally well with all kinds of food.

A Trial will Prove It.

In these days of bombastical essays some persons may entertain doubt on the statement made in reference to Rex Magnus and the wonderful results and benefits accomplished by its use. Our answer to all such persons is this viz: It will do all that is claimed for it, and a trial will prove this statement.

How to Get It.

A trifling expenditure on your part will establish this fact to your entire satisfaction. You do not have to buy a county right, nor a ... recipe; we sell neither the one nor the other.

Samples Mailed, Post-paid.

We do offer, however, to supply you—in case your grocer, druggist or general storekeeper hasn't it on hand—with any brand of Rex Magnus which you may desire, upon receipt of the price. We will prepay postage charges on sample packages. The several brands and their respective uses and functions are herewith mentioned as a guide to readers. (It will not do to use for anything else than designated as long experience proves it to be necessary for different combinations.)

Brands and Prices.

Viandine—For preserving meats, fish and game	50 cts. ℔ lb
Ocean Wave—For preserving oysters, clams, lobsters, etc.	50 cts. ℔ lb

"Aqua Vitæ"—For preserving fluid extracts without alcohol, etc.	$1 ℔ lb
Anti-Ferment, Anti-Fly and Anti-Mold are explained by their names	50 cts. ℔ lb

Improves Food.

Every article of food treated by Rex Magnus remains perfectly sweet, natural in flavor, ripens and indeed is enhanced in value by the effects of this king of preservative agents.

It is Tasteless and Harmless.

Banquets in New Haven, Conn., Boston, Mass., and Chicago, Ill., have been held at which food treated and saved as Prof. Johnson treated and saved his twenty-three articles of food, were served. These public demonstrations of the wonderful effects of this preparation are uniformly applauded by the invited and attendant guests—and they came from every branch and walk of domestic and private life and embraced men of national and international fame.

Wins Applause.

The press of the country applaud the results, the people at large, both in this and every other country, need Rex Magnus, and better still it is within the reach of every one as to price.

Fresh food in all seasons and climates has heretofore been a luxury for the wealthy alone. Now every one may enjoy it by using Rex Magnus. Send for a package and test it yourself. In writing for it give your name, state, county and mention the brand desired. Send money order or by registered letter. Physicians who will agree to test it can receive sample package free. Please state school of practice. Circular of testimonials sent when requested. Address, mentioning The Oregonian.

LONDON LETTERS.

News and Gossip on Points now Interesting Europeans.

PARNELL'S REPLY TO THE POPE'S CIRCULAR.

The Irish Party will Stand on a Secession Platform—England Lays Down the Law to France, Etc.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—London cables have the following points:

GLADSTONE'S POSITION AND THE OPPOSITION HE IS MEETING.

Gladstone's overtures to the different divisions of the liberal party, made at the conference last Tuesday, are meeting with such general acceptance that his object, that of preventing dissolution by appeal to the country, will undoubtedly be gained. It is at least certain that to-day a perfect compromise has been arranged on the tenant farmers' bill, and a compromise conceded to the extreme radicals. The point they stood out for and their amendment to the bill has been accepted. This will secure to the occupying tenant full compensation for the value added to the holding by his improvements in all cases where such raising of the rent is made as will compel him to vacate, and will secure him against all such unjust increases of rent as are based solely on the added value of land, caused by improvement, and will make reference compulsory, in all cases where the tenant demands it. It has also been agreed to amend the bill so as entirely to abolish distraining for rent. With the amendments agreed upon the bill will now be unopposed in parliament by the whig section of the ministry, and will, it is believed, be carried against the entire conservative opposition, even if the Irish throw their votes with the tories. The Irish members, though, will stand aloof from the combinations of this bill, for the avowed purpose of throwing their votes with any opposition to the government which might appear strong enough, with their help, to defeat the measure, because Gladstone had threatened to appeal to the country if the bill be defeated, and Parnell believed his party would gain a great deal by a new election. It is not known how the Parnellites will vote on the bill, and the government does not seem to care. It is but one more added to the great number of instances in which Gladstone has snatched victory out of apparently certain disaster. At the Whit-Sunday adjournment the combinations against the premier were so many and so strong that the dissolution of parliament was predicted as sure, and sporting gentlemen were laying wagers on its certainty, but the first week of the renewed session of parliament sees him so strongly fortified through compromises that it would be foolish now to predict the failure of any of the government measures. Well informed politicians even believe that the government will have no difficulty in carrying all its points, and that it will bring the session to a proper close in due course of time, with all its business finished and with a clear course for the next session. The government feels so sure of its position that it has agreed to introduce, at the next session, a county franchise bill which will give equal electoral rights to towns and counties. The bill is almost certain to be carried. The dissension in the cabinet, however, seems to be intensifying. These quarrels are based almost entirely on disputes as to the methods adopted by the government in carrying on its business during the past session. Hon. James Chamberlain, president of the board of trade, does not hesitate to openly accuse Gladstone of having secured his present prospects of success on the tenant farmers' bill by going over to the whig party. Chamberlain has gone so far in this accusation that he boldly declares that the premier bought the support of the whigs, first by concessions in the nature of a bill, and then by the appointment of the Marquis of Lansdowne as governor general of Canada, to succeed the Marquis of Lorne. This appointment was bitterly opposed by nearly all the radicals in the cabinet. At one time the opposition brought on a crisis. Sir Charles Dilke then proposed to relieve the party by sending over to the dominion, as governor general, Hon. W. E. Forster, late chief secretary of Ireland. Sir Charles Dilke, in supporting his proposition, said he had conferred with Forster on the subject. Forster had expressed a willingness to accept the appointment. Gladstone opposed this strongly, as extremely inexpedient, upon the ground that Forster's presence in Canada as governor-general would be looked upon by a large proportion of the citizens of the United States as inconsistent with the very friendly relations at present existing between the American government and that of her majesty. Sir Charles Dilke and Chamberlain both insisted on Forster's appointment, and both declare that Gladstone, for the purpose of saving himself from the necessity of appealing to the country, has reversed all the policy of his party, and deserted it and joined the whigs.

PARNELL'S REPLY TO THE POPE'S CIRCULAR.

Parnell has at last made an official utterance, in the form of an open letter to a Paris journalist, concerning the pope's circular. He announces that he is pleased with it, because of the effect it will certainly have upon the fortune of the rest Irish party. The breach the papal circular has already caused among the papers which affected to represent the Irish cause, Mr. Parnell says, he regards with delight, because it will place the Catholic religion just where it belongs in the politics of Ireland. Some of the truest republicans in Ireland have felt themselves compelled to conceal their sympathy with the Irish party, and to hold aloof from all participation in its movements, because of a general impression that Ireland being the stronghold of the Catholic faith no genuine Irish political movement could ever occur except it were dominated by the church. Now that the pope had officially declared that the church did not recognize the Irish party, but forbade its priests to make themselves conspicuous in its actions, the Irish people could realize how completely Irish politics were divorced from religious domination, and Catholics and Protestant republicans could work together in complete harmony. Parnell conceded that the pope's action may have been astute, from a Roman point of view, but claims that Leo XIII. overreached himself if he intended to give to England the influence of the Catholic church in Ireland, because the principal effect of his recent circular would be, among Irish Catholics, a conviction that in politics they were absolutely independent of the church, and among Protestants a conviction that they can act with republicans without subjecting themselves to the domination of Rome. Parnell's letter concludes with a statement that while the majority of the Irish people may be submissive, in matters in faith, to the pope, in matters of politics and nationality they respect themselves.

SECESSION THE BASIS OF THE FUTURE PROGRAMME.

The Irish national league are preparing for a campaign of extraordinary energy. They hope to increase the number of the Parnell party in parliament from thirty to sixty. If they succeed they will have, by the addition of sympathizers, a solid vote of seventy in the next session. Parnell is preparing a proclamation which he will issue to the Irish people. It will strongly urge all Irishmen, irrespective of religion, to rally to the support of the national party. It will distinctly announce the separation of Ireland as the basis of the future programme of the Irish people. The executive committee of the national league will thoroughly pamphlet and placard Ireland, and will issue and circulate complete instructions concerning all regulations and laws, and do anything possible to guide the Irish people in the interests of the national party in the coming elections. The secretary of each branch of the league will be supplied with copies of a list of voters.

ENGLAND LAYS DOWN THE LAW TO FRANCE.

Lord Granville yesterday notified M. Challemel Lacour, the French minister of foreign affairs, that in the event of war between France and China, England would refuse to recognize any blockade by France of Chinese ports, unless France would guarantee that the blockade should extend to the entire Chinese coast, and that all of it would be perfectly and completely blockaded; and that if the mouths of the Canton river and the approaches to the port of Shanghai and other ports of entry, in which France and the other nations friendly to France were interested, were allowed to go unenclosed in the blockade, England would consider herself bound to send English war ships to China for the purpose of preventing France from maintaining any part of the blockade. M. Challemel Lacour to-day sent a reply to Lord Granville that there was no war between France and China, and that France hoped nothing would arise requiring any exercise of British protest.

GLADSTONE OPPOSES THE QUEEN'S WISHES.

The duke of Albany's request to be appointed governor general of Canada, in place of the Marquis of Lorne, was supported by a personal intimation from the queen that her son should have the position. Gladstone refused to allow the young duke to succeed the marquis, fearing that the appointment would be regarded as a special favor to royalty. He said he did not want the people to think that official positions were sinecures reserved for members of the royal family. This ministerial reason is not, however, the only one which prompted Gladstone's refusal. It is thought that he regarded the venture as a dangerous one, and that to send the queen's son to Canada would be to invite some desperate action on the part of Irish fenians in America.

THE SECOND SUEZ CANAL.

The under secretary of the treasury certainly will succeed Major Barring as financial minister to India at once. Major Barring will go to Egypt as British minister, with plenary powers for the purpose of completing all necessary arrangements for digging a second canal, now being determined upon. Major Barring enters upon the mission with a distinct understanding on the part of the English government that he favors the route selected from Alexandria along the Nile through Cairo, and thence to the Red Sea, and that he opposes the route parallel to the Suez canal favored by De Lesseps. Major Barring thoroughly represents those British capitalists who determined not only to have a second canal cut, but also to crush out De Lessep's canal and his influence and monopoly in Egypt.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL SCHEME.

The channel tunnel scheme bids fair to emerge successfully from its long slumber in military opposition. The duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief Lord Woolsley, General Simmonds and a majority of the British military authorities, who have given their testimony before the committee appointed to investigate the question of the expediency of allowing the work to be undertaken, all oppose it, but a great majority of the scientific engineers who have testified, favor it. General Adye, the surveyor general of ordnance, and General Clark, inspector of fortifications, agree with the majority of witnesses, and the committee, which has now completed its inquiries, will report by a large majority in favor of the construction of the tunnel.

GOOD DEMAND FOR MECHANICS.

In the labor market things are lively. Buildings are going up in all parts of the metropolis, and skilled workmen are in great demand. At the principal works ship building is active, most of the yards being in full work. In the engineers' shops, especially in the north of England, there is a boom. The colliery districts are unsettled, and the Sheffield cutlery works are languid. At Leicester, Nottingham and Manchester there are plenty of orders in textile trades, but at unpaying rates. A Leeds the hat and cap makers are busy, as are also the Bradford spinners, the Suderfield weavers and the Kedderminster Brussels carpet weavers are well employed. The tapestry makers are quiet. The Macclesfield silk weavers are not doing much. On the Clyde ship building is going on rapidly, but business is dull on the Tyne.

AMERICAN STOCKS IN LONDON.

There has been much talk in financial circles recently as to the impending panic. A large amount of United States stocks have been freely sold on this market, but at Monday's settlement American stocks were scarce, especially New York Central and Lake Shore. Only Pennsylvania was plentiful. Good houses think that any idea of a panic is absurd, and point out that there is no real likeness between the state of affairs at present and those in 1871. Purchases were made to-day, on an improved tone being reported from New York.

THE QUEEN AT BALMORAL.

Queen Victoria is living retired at Balmoral and seeing no one. She is still suffering from low spirits and a shattered nervous system. The physicians are constant in their attendance on her majesty.

TO THE MEMORY OF JOHN BROWN.

A large monument of gray granite is being placed over the grave of John Brown in the Crathie kirkyard. A memorial cairn is on the mountain overlooking the castle. In addition to a monument of brass in the prince consort's mausoleum at Frogmore, a tablet to Brown's memory is being placed in a nave of St. George's chapel at Windsor. It is difficult to imagine what will be the next project of the queen for the perpetuation of John Brown's name.

VANDERBILT REFUSED TO ATTEND.

W. H. Vanderbilt refused the request of a delegation of English holders of New York Central and Grand Trunk shares to attend a meeting of the shareholders, and personally explain his resignation of the presidency of the former corporation. The only reason he gave for his refusal was that he was visiting England for the sole purpose of enjoying a holiday, and not to attend to any business. He, however, admitted to the delegation that he was intending to retire absolutely from all business, if he could arrange to do so satisfactorily.

THE ALABAMA AWARD.

Coleridge Kinnaird, M. P., will persist in his motion regarding the disposition of the surplus of the Alabama claims award. It was announced to-day that Kinnaird has the approval of Gladstone, and that the premier is favorably disposed to hand the United States, and the government will consider the expediency of returning to England the balance of the money now awarded for claims. The question will, it is thought, become a parliamentary one.

BIG SALARIES FOR GREAT ACTORS AND ACTRESSES.

Madame Sembrech has signed a contract with H. E. Abbey of America at $1250 a night. Colonel Mapleson gives Madame Gerster for her American season $1000 a night. Madame Nilsson will receive $1500 a night. Patti's contract at $5500 a night is still unsigned. For the London engagement Patti receives only $2000 a night. Howard Paul's contract as acting manager for Charles Wyndham during his next American tour is now signed.

A BRILLIANT BENEFIT.

Miss Ellen Perry's benefit Thursday night at the Lyceum theater was a brilliant affair. The prince and princess of Wales were present, and the character of the large audience was most distinguished. The boxes and stalls were occupied by many members of the aristocracy. No bouquets were presented.

GLADSTONE WILL BE QUESTIONED.

A question has been placed on notice in the papers of the house of commons, to interrogate Gladstone as to the circumstances of the appointment of the marquis of Landsdowne to the vice-royalty of Canada. It is admitted that the duke of Albany expressed a wish to represent the queen in Canada, and it was thought by many persons that the appointment was desirable, in spite of his delicate health.

JOURNALISTIC ENTERPRISE.

The story of the coronation of the czar, by the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, contained the largest number of words wired to London, viz: 110,000; while the Times, though only employing 40,000, managed to supply a long account.

OPPOSING THE LEAGUE.

The Irish landlord party already are raising, by subscription, large sums of money for the purpose of counteracting the efforts of the league.

EARL SPENCER'S REASON.

Earl Spencer says the reason he declined to submit to the queen a petition for the commutation of the sentence of Thomas Coffrey, who was hanged to-day for the Phoenix park murder, was that he knew that her majesty would refuse to entertain it. Spencer declares that he told the deputation of Irish members who presented the petition that he knew it would be useless to place the matter before her majesty.

IMPERIAL EXTRAVAGANCE.

Interest in the imperial show at Moscow has vanished, and the reverse of the rose-colored picture is beginning to appear. It was sustained with a lavish hand. Extravagance, from the imperial family down to the smallest ambassador, absolutely had no limit, and was the talk of Europe.

PARIS FILLED WITH AMERICANS AND ENGLISH.

Paris is full of Americans and English. Every hotel is overflowing, and the greatest gaiety and excitement is prevailing in view of the splendid weather. The city never looked gayer and the shopkeepers have completely recovered from their gloom of the winter at the prospect of all the money which they hear is coming from America, as it never came before.

THE STYLE OF THE MACKAYS.

Mr. and Mrs. Mackay, and their pilgrimage to Moscow, attract much attention, and the whole European press is taken up with the magnificence of Mr. Mackay's private car and the fifteen Worth dresses which were contained in Mrs. Mackay's private baggage car. Even at Moscow neither Orientalism nor imperial splendor could throw Mrs. Mackay in the shade.

AN ECCENTRIC DUKE.

The Duc de Marnie has distinguished himself by appearing as a ballet at an entertainment at the Circle de Larue Royale. His costume was perfect and startling en decolette. People say he has lost his mind in New York.

SENOR ROMERO IN LONDON.

Senor Romero, Mexican minister at Washington, who is now here, was referred to the treaty resuming diplomatic relations with England, and said that it had been agreed if the Mexican government accepted the treaty, that he should become minister at London. This commercial treaty gives England the "most favored terms."

AMERICAN ESTABLISHMENTS DESTROYED.

Further advices from Madagascar report that the French bombardment of Majunga destroyed chiefly American merchant establishments, including two large warehouses. Two English gunboats have been ordered to Tamatave.

THE HARD LUCK OF PLUNGER WALTON.

If Mr. Plunger Walton's luck does not turn there will soon be an end of him on the turf. He is said to have dropped over $100,000 at New Market and Epsom. He has a hard time of it. They make it hot for him everywhere.

The Spread of Mormonism in North Carolina.

CHARLOTTE, June 3.—[Special.]—The progress of Mormonism in North Carolina is causing much alarm. In rural districts, remote from towns, missionaries are at work seducing the ignorant. In Gaston and Rutherford counties especially is this work being carried on. There is a band of seventeen Mormon missionaries scattered around this section, who keep up no public intercourse but meet quietly and compare notes of progress. They appoint a meeting in the neighborhood, inviting only those whom they think will be easy subjects of conversion. Once in the meetings, morbid feeling and curiosity lead the people on until the work is done. Before being admitted they are baptized by emersion, and this fact finds success with the votaries of Baptist tendencies. The baptisms are always in the night time, and the dupes are required to be in a state of nudity. The half dozen counties adjoining Rutherford are the special fields of these men. Among the most prominent of these preachers are William Dorton and Jabez Brentwell. They have converted thirty-seven, fifteen of whom they have already sent to Utah. Not long since two apostles were passing a field, in which two white women were plowing. They hailed them, had a conversation with them, and within half an hour took them to the ford near by and baptized them, when they returned to their plowing, and next day were on their way to Utah. This shows how easily these ignorant creatures are duped, and as the field of operations is being continually enlarged, a great portion of the people being of the poor class, the question is becoming one of great interest, which the legislature will be called upon to settle. Emigration to Utah does not represent the full extent of the evil done. Whole communities give up other church relations and become what may be called semi-Mormons, laying the groundwork for more pronounced Mormonism hereafter. It is this demoralized element which remains at home, from which the trouble will come. The Journal-Observer, a leading paper, states on this subject this morning that it is a shame to our civilization that such things are permitted in our midst. Missionaries are needed, but the sort of missionary power, and the one to suit the case best, is in the household of nearly every man, or it can be procured at any hardware store. It is the shot gun. Introduce a few of these priests to these missionaries, and our country will soon be effectually rid of them.

The "Star's" Plan to Break up Mormonism.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—The Star recommends eastern churches and educational societies to support the new western educational commission in Utah, as the most effectual mode of breaking the power of the Mormon church. It says: "Thus far the Edmund's law has been practically a dead letter. It has not sent as much as one polygamist to jail, and even if force were used could only intensify the misdirected enthusiasm in which the system is anchored. The new western educational society was founded for the purpose of establishing free christian schools in territories where they were most palpably needed. Generous subscriptions have been furnished by individuals and churches in many places. As a means of accomplishing its end, nothing yet tried has surpassed the christian schools."

NOTABLE DEAD.

A WELL KNOWN TOBACCO MAN.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—Cortelian Howey Lilienthal, the well-known manufacturer of smoking and chewing tobacco, died at his residence in Yonkers Friday afternoon, after an illness which had extended over the past two years. Deceased was a son of Sour Lilienthal, who established a tobacco manufactory on the corner of Washington and Bat y streets eighty years ago.

THE MOHAWK HISTORIAN.

NEW YORK, June 3.—[Special.]—Jeptha R. Symones, the well-known historian of Mohawk, died on Thursday night at his home in Port Plain, New York. He was 76 years old.

PANDORA'S BOX

RUSSIA.

THE CZAR ADDRESSES THE ELDERS AND THE MARSHALS.

MOSCOW, June 3.—After the fete at Peterosky park yesterday the emperor invited the village elders, marshals and the provincial nobility to a dinner. Addressing the elders, he said he was glad to see them. He thanked them for entering so heartily into the festivities of the coronation, and added: "When you return to your homes do not credit the senseless rumors respecting the redistribution of grants of land. Such rumors were started by the enemies of the crown. All property must be unassailable." Addressing the marshals, he said: "I thank you for your fidelity. I am convinced of the cordial feelings of the nobility and hope they will support everything conducive of benefit to the throne and the fatherland. May God give us a peaceful and quiet life." Five persons were crushed to death in the tremendous crowd that sought admission to Peterosky park. The emperor and the empress drove through the city to the convent of St. Sergius to-day without an escort. There was a grand parade of Circassian troops to-day.

HE HOPED FOR A CONSTITUTIONAL REGIME.

MOSCOW, June 3.—The mayor of Moscow, who, it is stated, intends to resign in consequence of the disapproval of his speech at the banquet to the mayors of the cities, said in the speech that he hoped the czar would institute constitutional regime.

BANQUET GIVEN BY NEWSPAPER REPRESENTATIVES.

MOSCOW, June 3.—A banquet was given to-day in honor of Woganoff, press censor, by foreign newspaper representatives. There will be no fetes at St. Petersburg for the present, and the czar will not not make a state entry into that city.

FRANCE.

FRANCE'S PLAN WITH MADAGASCAR.

PARIS, June 2.—Voltaire says: The French commander in Madagascar has been instructed to withdraw his forces from that country, only after Queen Panarole has recognized the French protectorate as specified by the treaties of 1840 and 1841. The admiral will insist on the right of Frenchmen to own land in Madagascar, and will claim an indemnity of 1,500,000 francs for the cost of the expedition. It is stated that the Horas have made overtures, with a view of coming to an understanding with France.

DUEL WITH SWORDS.

PARIS, June 3.—George Cassagnac and an old sergeant major fought a duel with swords on the Swiss frontier to-night. Cassagnac's throat was pierced. It is feared the wound will prove fatal.

IRELAND.

NOTES FROM DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, June 3.—Five members of the republican brotherhood were arrested at Waterford on a charge of being connected with a conspiracy to murder.

Archbishop Croke to-day visited Tipperary, one of the parishes of his diocese. The town was gaily decorated in honor of the visit and an address presented to him, to which he replied from the altar of the parish church.

AUSTRIA.

MARRIED TO A BARON.

VIENNA, June 3.—[Special.]—Miss Louise Price of Philadelphia was married to the baron Gabriel Borremiza de Magy Kasson, first lieutenant in the Prince of Eburn and Taxi's third regiment of cavalry.

SPAIN.

MEMBERS OF THE "BLACK HAND" SENTENCED.

MADRID, June 3.—The tribunal at Cerfes has sentenced one member of the "Black Hand" society to life-long servitude, and another to seventeen years, for the murder of a man who declined to join the society.

ITALY.

ELECTION FOR MEMBERS OF THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

ROME, June 3.—In the election to-day for member of the chamber of deputies, Calonna received 5922 votes and Ricietti Garibaldi, 3596.

CRIMINAL.

A SHREWD SWINDLER CAPTURED.

BOSTON, June 3.—James H. Langley alias Dr. Langley alias Henry Langley, known throughout the country as "King of Peter Funks," was arrested on arrival of the Fall river boat. For years he has been operating in the leading cities of the east and west as a promoter of stock jobbing operations, organized on paper, for swindling purposes. One "corporation" is the United States Construction and Investment Company, and another is the Limited Stock Express Company. During the last five years Langley has organized a score of bogus concerns. A Bostonian named Warrel was inveigled into one enterprise, and lost $10,000. All of Langley's concerns proved worthless while the victims are legion. Langley is supposed to have a number of confe[illegible]ates in various parts of the country. Langley [illegible] said to have served a term in the New York pe[illegible]ntiary, and also to have several indictments [illegible]ing against him in the west. The costly furnitu[re] and trappings of the office of the construction [co]mpany were mortgaged sometime since.

HANGED BY AN IOWA MOB.

Des Mo[illegible]ne, June 3.—A crowd of about 100 men assembled at Winterset, Iowa, shortly after midnight th[illegible] morning, and being refused the jail keys broke in[illegible]th crowbars and sledges. They then led out John Hammer, held for the murder of Wm. Newell, [illegible] a year ago, and hanged him to a tree in the cour[illegible]ouse square. While he was struggling one of t[illegible] mob shot him through the heart. The party fi[illegible] a volley, and escaped on horseback. There is [illegible] little excitement.

TWO DE[illegible]RADOES CHECKED WITH A DOSE OF SLUGS.

WICHITA[illegible], June 3.—[Special.]—Frank Brown and John An[illegible]son, members of the notorious Creek gang, af[illegible] drinking all day, started out last night with re[illegible]ers to take the town. They went through the stre[illegible] shooting, and the place was terrorized for a ti[illegible]. Finally two shots were fired from some unknow[illegible]arter, and both desperadoes dropped, riddled [wit]h slugs. Anderson soon died, and it is thought [Br]own cannot live.

[illegible] WASSON WILL PLEAD GUILTY.

SAN A[illegible]NIO, June 3.—Major Wasson, army defaulting [pa]ymaster, in an elaborate address to the court, [illegible] plead guilty to the embezzlement of $24,000, but [wil]l resist the charge of embezzling $13,000, which h[e i]s alleged to have lost.
